Exports and Prosperity

HALEY FISKE, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, died suddenly yesterday, aged seventy-seven.

His death is a loss to the world of insurance, and to the American business generally. Mr. Fiske had developed his great company, with amazing success. Shortly before his death his energies had been concentrated upon works of public utility, including the financing of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and especially on providing dwellings, at reasonable rentals, for families of moderate means.

His own employes had first call on the Metropolitan Life apartments, high grade, at low cost, then came teachers, firemen, policemen. There were thousands on the waiting list.

Mr. Fiske did not merely indulge a philanthropic impulse. With his associate, Frederick Ecker, vice-president of the Metropolitan company, he proved that apartments at moderate rentals, wisely planned, could pay a fair return on the investment of insurance moneys. Thus he promoted such building on a large scale.

An important public service, rendered by the Metropolitan Life, under Mr. Fiske's direction was a persistent advertising campaign giving invaluable information on health, and the prevention of disease. It would be difficult to exaggerate the value of this public service.

At Lakehurst, a group of forty boy scouts, from Monmouth County organization, established the first boy scout contact with aviation. Commander Rosendahl, of the Los Angeles, arranged to start the scouts on the "air-minded" road.

Commander Starr, of the foreign war veterans drills the boys, and they are proud of their teacher knowing that he has made more than 100 parachute jumps.

To recruit fliers of the future, among boy scout organizations is a good idea. A million boys of today will be fliers, twenty years hence.

One feature in our prosperity is the growth in United States exports. James A. Farrell, president of United States Steel, reminds you that this country is exporting products now, at an annual rate exceeding by one billion dollars a year, the exports of six years ago.

And this is done in spite of high ocean freights, and of foreign wages and living costs, far below ours.

Each state has something that sells for a foreign market.

Pennsylvania supplies wire fencing to the fields of Argentina.

New England sends shoes all over the world. Virginia sends tobacco to Venezuela, Ohio sends to Spain glass bottles in which Spain ships port and sherry to England. Illinois sends farm tractors to Brazil and Russia, the South sends cotton to Finland.

Mr. Farrell shows that big prosperity depends on making what you need, a lot more to sell abroad. Generally speaking, we have exported raw materials, cotton, copper and other goods, in which high wages play a less important part.

But we also dominate the world in moving pictures and automobiles, with high wages involved.

This makes the present French effort to shut out our moving picture competition important to everybody.

And it makes reasonable caution in increasing our tariffs important. American labor and business must be protected, but unless we buy of others they cannot buy of us.

Russia accuses political enemies of working, disguised as a Baptist organization, for anti-revolutionary work, it appears, is usually done in Russia under some religious disguise.

Mr. Rockefeller, perhaps because he is a Baptist is accused of "using oil money to corrupt the Soviet proletariat." It would be good for the Soviet proletariat if Mr. Rockefeller's organization would show Russia how to fight disease and organize industry.

Capital may be a fearful octopus, but it does know how to get things done.

Man, no matter how poor, will always buy two things, whiskey and drugs. China's revolutionary and other generals, according to a despatch from Peking, compel all land owners to plant a certain area with poppies, for opium production, and from the crops, extract tens of millions a year.

The heathen, in his blindness, bowing down to wood and stone, does not, however, spend as much for deadly drugs as our own enlightened country.

Rebels Control Eight Mexican States

HOOVER TAKES OATH; PLEDGES ENFORCEMENT OF DRY LAW

MEXICAN ARMY ACTS IN REVOLT

Mexico City, March 4 (AP)—The Mexican Government mobilized loyal forces today to meet the attacks of widespread and serious revolution.

Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former President, was drafted from his retirement and made Secretary of War in charge of all military operations.

Thus far all indications have been that the revolt is entirely of a military nature, no mention being made in dispatches of any connection with the so-called Catholic uprisings reported at various times.

The rebels claim eight states have already joined in the revolt.

Today, Mexican Nurses, connected with the customs service working out of Agua Prieta and Naco, in Sonora, surrendered their arms to revolutionists.

The rebels, following capture of Nogales last night, had given the Girls Near Death in Flames

One man was injured and 12 girls narrowly escaped when an explosion of chemicals set fire today to the Everlastic, Inc., factory on Spencer and Webster aves., Chelsea.

Damage by flames and water amounted to more than $30,000, according to factory officials. The blaze drove 350 employes, including many girls and women, to the street.

The man who was burned was Matthew Meiklejohn, dye expert, who was at work in the printing department on the second floor of the factory's three-story building.

Meiklejohn was mixing coloring matter to be used in decorating certain of the Everlastic products, which include rubberized webbing manufactures such as suspenders, reducing girdles, garters, etc.

The mixture exploded almost in the chemist's hands. He was thrown away from his bench and the surrounding walls were instantly ablaze.

Twelve young women employed in the department ran for the exits,

Swift, Sure Justice, Asked by Hoover

Washington, March 4 (INS)—President Herbert Hoover's inaugural address today was as follows:

My Countrymen:

This occasion is not alone the administration of the most sacred oath which can be assumed by an American citizen. It is a dedication and consecration under God to the highest office in service of our people.

I assume this trust in the humility of knowledge that only through the guidance of Almighty Providence can I hope to discharge it over increasing burdens.

It is in keeping with tradition throughout our history that I should express simply and directly the opinions which I hold concerning some of the matters of present importance.

If we survey the situation of our nation both at home and abroad, we find many satisfactions; we find some causes for concern.

We have emerged from the losses of the Great War and the reconstruction following it with increased virility and strength. From this strength we have contributed to the recovery and progress of the world.

What America has done has given renewed hope and courage to all who have faith in government by the people. In the large view, we have reached a higher degree of comfort and security

DEMANDS REFORM IN COURTS

Washington, March 4 (INS)—Herbert Hoover inaugurated his presidency today with a challenge and a plea to the American people to obey the laws that they themselves have fastened into the Constitution and written into the statutes.

The man who thus assumed his first elective office declared the greatest menace to America is "disregard and disobedience of law."

It was a direct and personal challenge to the ordinary law-abiding citizen to quit buying bootleg liquor.

"There would be little traffic in illegal liquor if only criminals patronized it," he said.

PLEDGES ENFORCEMENT

For his own part, the new President pledged determined and unflagging efforts to secure better enforcement. But in the same breath he admitted no efforts by the government can be successful without the co-operation of the average man and woman.

"The measure of success that the government shall attain," he said, "will depend upon the moral support which you, as citizens, extend."

As a start toward clearing up the prohibition mess, Mr. Hoover proclaimed his intention of appointing a fact-finding commission and proposed the transfer of enforcement from the Treasury to the Department of Justice.

The importance with which the new President regards prohibition and enforcement was exemplified in devoting nearly a third of his inaugural address to it—and the first third, at that.

HOPES FOR WORLD PEACE

The only other subject to receive such extended treatment was world peace.

"I covet for this administration," he said, "a record of having further contributed to advance the cause of peace."

He proclaimed America's willingness to "take a practical part in all useful international undertakings;" made a "sincere offer" to the world powers to engage in further limitation of armament; and expressed a hope that a way will yet be found for the United States to fully subscribe to the world court.

VAST MULTITUDE HAILS NEW PRESIDENT IN RAIN AMID LAVISH SPLENDOR

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Correspondent.

Capitol Plaza, Washington, March 4—An Iowa orphan boy, who developed into a globe-trotting engineer whose work for many years made him almost a stranger to his own country, became the 31st President of the United States today amid inaugural pomp and pageantry such as the capital has not witnessed in a quarter of a century.

Bare-headed in the chill March wind, right hand resting upon the biblical tenets of his Quaker faith, Herbert Hoover took the oath to the highest office in the land while a distinguished company on the east steps of the Capitol sent their cheers and applause rolling wave-like across the crowded plaza. Two ex-Presidents were in that company, something no inauguration has seen before.

There was Calvin Coolidge, thin-faced and taciturn, who but a moment before had laid down the burdens his successor was assuming.

HOOVER'S OATH FIRST HEARD ROUND WORLD

Washington, March 4 (INS)—For the first time in history the world listened in today and heard an incoming President of the United States say "I do" in taking the oath of office. Three radio broadcasting systems of the country collaborated for the inaugural ceremonies, and arrangements were such that Europe as well got a description of the event pia the air. President Hoover's induction was "the first oath heard 'round the world."

"You are all gathered here today," said the mayor, "to witness one of the greatest spectacles in American history, made possible by one of the greatest newspapermen in the country for whom I have the greatest respect and deep admiration, Mr. William Randolph Hearst.

The Peck's skipper said that, on account of high wind and blinding snow, he anchored near Conanicut Island, but the force of the gale snapped one chain and pulled loose the stock of the other anchor. The

WOMAN CANDIDATE USES AIRPLANE IN READING

Mrs. Molly A. Sweetser, Reading's first woman candidate for election to the board of selectmen, used an airplane today to put the finishing touch to her whirlwind campaign.

As the Reading voters made their way to the polling places they were deluged with pamphlets bearing Mrs. Sweetser's portrait and literature. The bulletins were dropped by a Skyways, Inc., plane, which, emblazoned with Sweetser records swooped and soared above the town's principal streets.

Mrs. Sweetser is opposed by three men, Elias B. Currell, Harry W. Brown and Capt. Frank E. Gray. Currell is running for re-election.

INAUGURATION RICH IN POMP AND COLORFUL SPLENDOR

There was William Howard Taft, corpulent and jovial, the 26th President, now chief justice, who 20 years ago this murky March day, at the same time and on the selfsame spot, himself took the oath which he today administered to the incoming executive.

A fine drizzle began to fall at 12:15 o'clock and five minutes later a light rain was falling, while the stands and seats along the line of the inaugural parade turned into a huge black canopy of open umbrellas.

The prediction of the Weather Bureau had been a slight rain with increasing volume toward nightfall.

A few minutes before 11 o'clock Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover walked out on the White House portico. They were accompanied by Representative Snell of New York and Senator Moses of New Hampshire. After posing for photographers the group moved to the presidential car in an open landaulet.

Wives of Both in Line With the Two Cabinets

Here President Coolidge seated himself on the right with Mr. Hoover at his left. In the car accompanying them were Snell and Moses.

In the second car of the presidential entourage rode Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover. Mrs. Coolidge sat at the right.

A fanfare of military trumpets was heard as the presidential party started through the White House grounds.

Following the President and the President-elect and their wives came the members of the Coolidge Cabinet and their mates. They hurriedly took their seats in eight waiting autos and the presidential entourage started for the Capitol ceremonies that were to return President Coolidge to private citizenship and elevate Hoover to the presidency.

While the presidential party was assembling at the White House the new Cabinet met in the office of Vice-President Dawes, where the Cabinet was introduced to Senator Watson (R.), Indiana, new leader of the Senate, and other Senators. Mr. Hoover's new secretaries, George Akerson and Lawrence Ritchie, were also introduced by Dawes.

The Presidential party reached the Capitol at 11:18, having taken 20 minutes to traverse the mile from the White House.

The pace was kept purposely slow, for banked on either side of the avenue were thousands of cheering people, who wished to see the spectacle.

Both President Coolidge and the President-elect kept lifting their tall silk hats in response to the applause.

It was noted, however, that it was Mr. Coolidge who made the most frequent acknowledgement of the plaudits.

Mrs. Coolidge's popularity, which is great in Washington, was strikingly attested by the shouts that ran apace the cars down the avenue.

Shouts of "Mrs. Coolidge," "Mrs. Coolidge" followed by loud applause was an occurrence in almost every block.

Reaching the Senate side of the Capitol, the party went immediately to the President's room on the Senate floor. There the President seated himself at his desk and began looking over a batch of last minute bills of minor nature.

It Was Coolidge's Busy Day With Legislation

After a few moments, Mr. Hoover retired to the Senate military affairs room with several of his incoming Cabinet officers.

The outgoing Cabinet officers of the Coolidge administration found their chief busy when they arrived a few minutes after he did. They stood about the room waiting to give him the benefit of their particular departmental advice should he require it.

Shortly before 11:30 President Coolidge gave the customary answer of "no" to the inquiries of the Senate leaders, Senator Watson and Senator Robinson (D), Arkansas, as to whether he had any more business to communicate to the Senate.

His attitude was one of serious-filled up. Automobiles were barred for blocks around the grounds, in order to give the parade a chance to form up. And even those possessing cards of admission to the Capitol had to fight they way along in the curbs for blocks before they could get near enough in for their pasteboards to do them any good.

Rain had started to fall at 12:15 before the ceremonies outside the chamber were concluded.

There was no cover for the thousands outside. Only the high platform upon which the oath was to be taken was protected. The press stands were wide open and telegraph operators were hastily protecting instruments with oil cloth.

In a few minutes the great open space on the plaza was turned into a vast panorama of umbrellas.

The amplifiers outside carried the inaugural speech of Vice-President Curtis to the impatient crowd outside getting weather every minute.

Women who didn't have umbrellas protected their pre-Easter hats with newspapers. Some men in high silk hats did likewise.

The rain was accompanied by a stiff, driving wind from the north-east that struck a chill through flimsy spring finery.

Vice-President Curtis' speech was concluded at 12:25. Thereafter the proclamation calling the new senate into extraordinary session was read and the new members were sworn in.

The rain continued at 12:35 o'clock while the oath-taking was still going in the chamber, it showed no signs of slackening. Tarpaulins had been thrown over the microphones which were carrying the Hoover inaugural to the country.

The governors of more than half the states were there—the black-robed and venerable justices of the Supreme court—frock-coated senators, old and new—diplomats, the representatives of kings, resplendent in their brilliant court uniforms—the incoming and outgoing cabinet officers—the rank of the army and navy—and out and beyond all of these were many, many thousands, perhaps a quarter of a million, of the plain people of America by whose suffrage and because of whose confidence the man with the upraised hand was stepping into the first elective office he ever held, which is also the most powerful in the world.

And there on the white and gold platform, too, mingling with the hoity-toity of officialdom, was a group of Herbert Hoover's boyhood neighbors, from out where the corn grows tall. The proudest of the lot was "Old John" Reeder, 93, holding the hat of the man he remembered only as a barefoot boy in West Branch, Ia., whose mother taught the faith in a poor Quaker community. Hard by "Old John" was Newt Gentler, another Iowan, who once "licked" the round-faced man standing there so solemn and stern-visaged. Newt wasn't belligerent today.

The first bill that President Coolidge signed was a measure for the enlargement for the Capitol plaza, whre inaugural ceremonies such as today's are held.

Hoover Patient as He Waits for His 'Cue'

Judging from the crush there today, the bill could have been passed years ago and provided twice the dimensions and it wouldn't have been enough to handle today's throngs.

The second bill to get the Coolidge signature was a minor relief bill. It was then 25 minutes before the inauguration of Hoover.

Mr. Hopver remained in the Senate military affairs room, chatting with friends. It was a tedious wait for him. Neither tradition nor custom imposes any duty upon the President-elect during this period and he has little to do but watch the clock and perhaps nervously anticipate what lies immediately ahead of him.

With only 10 minutes to go, President Coolidge by a sweep of his pen gave government employes what they have long sought, a year round half holiday on Saturdays.

A conspicuous and withal lonely figure in all the glittering array of fashion and pomp in the Senate chamber was Oscar De Priest, the newly elected negro member of Congress from Chicago. He sat in the rear row of the chamber, an interested spectator to all the proceedings. Many was the lorgnets that was raised in his direction, but he seemed unconscious and oblivious to it.

At 11:50 o'clock President Coolidge signed two more minor relief bills and then sat back to wait for the Senate to give him something else to do, as his desk was clear. He glanced at the clock. Ten minutes to go.

Mr. Hoover in another room, also watched the clock. Senator Moses came in with Rep. Snell and they chatted with him.

A moment later the tramp of some four hundred members of the House headed by Speaker Nicholas Longworth echoed in the corridors.

"Mr. President, the House of Representatives," announced the doorkeeper. They came in two by two, and completely filled up the Democratic side of the chamber. All the senators had been moved over on the right. "Nick" gave a little wave to his wife, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who sat in her accustomed seat in the members' gallery. She wore a red and white costume with a blue scarf.

At 11:58 o'clock the Senate clock was moved eight minutes because all of the dignitaries who were supposed to be present had not arrived, a murmur ran around the galleries as the hands moved back.

Dawes Gives Oath to Next Vice-President

The enormous crowds outside grew apace as the hour drew near for the great transition. It seemed at 12 o'clock that it was not possible for any more people to crowd in between the tightly drawn military and police lines, but crowd in they did.

Promptly at 12 o'clock in the Senate chamber the Supreme Court of the United States was announced. Led by Chief Justice Taft, the night-black-robed judges glided noiselessly in and took their seats down in front.

A second time the clock was shoved back, this time five minutes, making 13 in all. It was just as well, for Curtis came in just as the hands moved backward. There was considered handclapping as he entered the chamber, made familiar to him through long years of service.

Then in came President Coolidge alone. The chamber arose and stood as he took his seat on the rostrum.

For a third time the clock was shoved back, again for five minutes.

"Where's Hoover?" ran the comment around the galleries as necks were craned.

The new President entered the chamber at 12:10 o'clock and again the chamber stood. He took a seat on the rostrum beside Mr. Coolidge. They both glanced at the clock.

Dawes then swore his successor, Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas into office, took a parting shot at the Senate rules and adjourned the old congress. Curtis then took the gavel and brought the Senate into special session.

In front of the new President as he stood facing the black-robed chief justice stretched row upon row of upturned faces. These were the elite of the inaugural hosts, those who by position or influence rated official seats for the historic occasion.

Behind him on the other side of the big dome of the Capitol stretched a solid mile of packed humanity on both sides of Pennsylvania avenue from the peace monument to the White House. They gathered early on their hard-purchased, hard-bottomed circus boards, waiting patiently for the moment when the new President would come riding back down the avenue in solitary state, to be followed later by the pageantry of marching thousands.

Overhead was the steady drone of airplanes.

What his thoughts were as he stood there with upraised hand listening to the Chief Justice intoning the words of the oath only Mr Hoover himself knows. But they might very well have been:

"Here am I, an orphan boy, born in poverty, self-educated and successful by my own efforts, unschooled in politics, and now attaining the headship of the most powerful country in the world by the greatest vote ever given any man in the world's history. Such is the miracle and the opportunity of my country."

Something like that may have been running through his head. Or, maybe it didn't. Maybe he was thinking of the weather and wondering whether those ominous looking skies were yet going to open up and spoil his day of triumph by drenching the thousands who came to acclaim him; he might even have been thinking of something that Calvin Coolidge said to him as they rode side by side together down the avenue an hour before. Although Mr. Coolidge is notoriously a silent man on such occasions. Or of the picture in the President room a few minutes earlier, when he stood and killed time in conversation while the hands of the clock ticked off the death of the old administration.

No one but Mr. Hoover knows what his thoughts were as he stood there and gazed into the face of his predecessor and swore to uphold the Constitution and defend it against all enemies.

Whatever they were, they turned away after the simple "I do" in response to the questioning oath, and, facing the multitude before him, launched into the speech that contained his policies and his hopes.

Hoover Breakfasts Alone on Eggs While Family Sleeps

Washington, March 4 (AP)—Mr. Hoover breakfasted alone at 8 o'clock on scrambled eggs and toast. At that hour all of the others in the big mansion on S st. still were taking a last 40 winks against the wearying day-long program of activity ahead. After breakfast Justice Harlan Stone of the Supreme Court, a friend and neighbor of the President-elect, dropped in for a chat.

While Mrs. Hoover was having breakfast at 8:30 o'clock with her sister, Mrs. Mary Lovett of Long Beach, Cal., and her uncle, W. D. Henry of Wahpeton, N. D., two large sacks of mail were delivered at the front door. Manifestly they contained many presents from faraway admirers, but for the time being they remained unopened.

INAUGURAL GARDEN PARTY

stood out most prominently in the huge audience were Mrs. Charles L. O'Connor of Fairmount ave, Hyde Park, and her four children.

Mrs. O'Connor, wife of a policeman attached to the West Roxbury station, arrived at the Garden carrying in her arms 14-month-old Herbert, whose birthday this is and who bears the same first name as the President, and with Marjorie, three; Marion, five, and Charles L., Jr., trailing at her skirt.

From the mother's arm hung a bag out of which peeped the top of a nursing bottle. She had brought lunch for all.

The O'Connors were seated far down—in the second row.

Long before 9:30, when the doors were opened, the crowd had begun to gather, and in the following half hour, pp to the beginning of the program with a radio description of Washington, thousands poured into the Garden.

A corps of 25 trained Garden ushers, under Chief Usher Jack Ryan, speedily seated the capacity house and so efficiently was the throng handled by Chief Doorman Joseph W. Volks and his crew that even when the crush was heaviest, there was scarcely a wait at any of the portals.

The radio description from 10 a. m. to 11 o'clock was listened to with keen interest and then Billy Dooley's Hotel Westminster Band entertained with several smart numbers.

When the Boston Evening American film, "Intimate Glimpses of Herbert Hoover," was flashed on the screen, the Boston Garden rocked with cheers that continued throughout the 15-minute run of the film.

Helene Trolsaas followed the film with a perfect vocal rendition of "The Star Spangled Banner," and as her last note died away, to be succeeded by a burst of applause, Mayor Nichols and Acting Governor Cook entered the Garden and were cheered.

After the addresses by the Mayor and Acting Governor there was more music—and then at high noon the inauguration ceremonies began to come in over the radio from the national capital.

Those who failed to bring food with them were relieved to learn that the food concessionaire at the Garden was will provided, and that basket boys would be sent through the auditorium during the half-hour immediately following the inaugural ceremonies and preceding the elaborate musical program to be presented by the Boston Evening American with the assistance of celebrated musicians.

A number of boxes had been reserved for City, State, army and navy officials. A section of the floor seats was held for delegations of Disabled Veterans, girls from the New England Conservatory of Music, and groups of clergy. Otherwise the entire great indoor stadium holding upwards of 17,000 persons, was thrown open without reserve to readers of the Boston Evening American.

N. E. States in Parade Link 1929 and 1775

Washington, March 4 (AP)—New England today helped to link the beginning of the American republic with the newest milestone in its history. It not only sent its six Governors to participate in the inauguration of Herbert Hoover as 31st President, but, in the retinue of the Connecticut executive, it furnished a vivid reminder of the Revolution which brought the presidential office into being.

Placed in the inaugural procession in the order their state entered the Union, Connecticut's Governor John H. Trumbull, and his escort were assigned to positions close to the front of their section. In addition to his wife and two daughters and his staff, which included John Coolidge, son of the retiring President and fiance of Miss Florence Trumbull, the Governor's escort included military units of long historic lineage.

FIRST IN LINE

One of these, the Governor's Foot Guards, traced its history back to 1775 and the struggle for freedom. Another, the Governor's Horse Guards, was only five years the junior of the foot guards. Both brought with them their resplendent regalia, adopted by their founders and ever since preserved through the generations which have followed.

Assigned to a position between them was the famous Battery E of the 242d Coast Artillery Corps of the Connecticut National Guard. Farther back, in another division, prominent places had been assigned to the Connecticut Marching Club and the Bridgeport Fife and Drum Corps.

The Connecticut Governor's position in line was in front of that assigned to Massachusetts and was followed by intervals by those allotted to New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont and Maine. Only states which had sent their Governors were given positions in this division of the procession.

All of the New England Governors including Frank G. Allen of Massachusetts, Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire, Norman S. Case of Rhode Island, John E. Weeks of Vermont and William T. Gardiner of Maine were there and were accompanied by their wives

LEAVE FOR HOME

Several of the New England delegations were to leave for home immediately after completing their strenuous inaugural programs by attendance tonight at the grand charity ball, a function arranged as a sort of semi-revival of official inaugural balls of the past.

The Connecticut delegation planned to do its resting en route and was prepared to take an early morning train after the ball, but Governor Case and his group of World War veterans, who were the first to arrive from New England, intended to remain until Friday morning.

The Rhode Islanders came prepared to conduct the daily business of the Governor's officer from their headquarters here. Governor Weeks and his Vermonters were to return late today.

The inaugural day program gave state delegations little time to plan their own amusements or to accept invitations, except for dinner tonight. It called for their presence this morning at the Capitol, where the Governors had the privilege of the Senate floor.

They would witness there the inauguration of Charles Curtis of Kansas as Vice-President, later the induction of Herbert Hoover and the retirement of their fellow New Englander, Calvin Coolidge, from the presidency; participate in the long inaugural procession and review the parade from the President's stand. Still later they would be received by Mr. and Mrs. Hoover and at night there was the charity ball.

Hoover's Epigrams

Washington, March 4 (AP)—President Hoover's inaugural address bristled with epigrams. Here are some of them:

"We are steadily building a new race—a new civilization great in its own attainments.

"Rigid and expeditious justice is the first safeguard of freedom, the basis of all ordered liberty, the vital force of progress."

• • •

"There would be little traffic in illegal liquor if only criminals patronized it."

"The duty of citizens to support the laws is co-equal with the duty of their government to enforce the laws which exist."

• • •

"Those who have a true understanding of America know that we have no desire for territorial expansion for economic or other domination of other peoples."

"We not only desire peace with the world, but to see peace maintained throughout the world."

"Peace can be contributed to by respect for our ability to defence."

"The animosities of elections should have no place in our government, for government must conform itself alone with the common weal."

• • •

...LDIERS' SHOP BRIGHT WITH COLORS AS SALES PROCEED—BETTY ALDEN

Mrs. Louis Frothingham Plans Garden Fete at North Easton Estate

IF THERE'S ONE SPOT IN THE WHOLE OF BOSTON THAT MORE than another is the real breath of spring and as varie-tinted as the posies in an old-time garden, it's the Soldiers' Shop in Boylston st. daily, crates from the uttermost ends of the country arrive, to disgorge a marvelous array of goods. For rich and inspirational coloring they out-rainbow the rainbow itself. And in workmanship they rival that of the guilds of old. The marvel of it is that man fingers recently trained in the ways of war can turn to artistry and contrive so perfectly and so delicately.

BRISKLY AND EFFICIENTLY, BUSINESS AT THE SHOP PROCEEDS without a hitch. And outside sales, when generous-minded ones open hotel parlors or private drawing rooms that shop may be temporarily set up, continue always to be a source of new friends and new dollars. Next on the list comes the sale at the Myles Standish, on March 6, when Meltheier the host offers his parlors for the shop's attractive showing; at the Hotel Sheraton when the sale goes on in the spacious foyer March 7, and at the Hotel Bellevue, March 8.

LATER IN THE SEASON COME SEVERAL GARDEN FETES, IMPORTANT of which is one at Mrs. Louis Frothingham's estate out in North Easton, when the roses are blooming. Keenly interested in the shop's welfare is Mrs. Frothingham. And likewise interested in that matron of highest social acclaim and manifold activities, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer. She is the board's newest member and with others, Mrs. Timothee Adamowska in particular, hopes ardently that the Shop may move serenely on its way, a perfect monument to the memory of its founder and promotor, the late Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards.

NOTHING WHATEVER WILL INTERFERE WITH THIS PROCEDURE in all probability. It seems very evident that having been set up on such solid foundation and being so firmly established, wise heads of the Legion auxiliary having the say-so will move heaven and earth, if necessary, to keep it going and that the shop will continue to function as such at its present address. It's the sort of philanthropy that long since ceased to be a philanthropy and became a finely administered business activity, for the sale of beautifully made goods at reasonable prices.

AT THE MOMENT DECISIONS AND AFFAIRS REGARDING THE Exchange and its future await the return of Mrs. Merle D. Graves to presidential duties. And after various conferences and other weighty discussions something important will be forthcoming in the way of an announcement. Meanwhile Mesdames Adamowska, Richard P. Strong, Cornbelle C. Francis, Edward M. Beals, Charles Royce Butler, James Cunningham Gray, Curtis Guild, William W. Taft, Miss Edith Ticknor, Miss Mary Whittaker, et cetera, et cetera, are as valiant in their endeavors and attentions as ever.

WHEN THE MARRIAGE RITUAL TRANSFORMS MISS THERESA WINSOR into a young matron, and she becomes Mrs. Frederick Woolsey Pratt, she and her spouse his themselves across the sea and set up their household goods in that English town of ancient learning and solid traditions, Oxford. Mr. Pratt is connected with the staff of Middlesex school, in Concord, and it is at the school where the reception, following the wedding rites, takes place, on the fateful day of March 16. A year done in the Oxonian manner will probably add several initials to follow after Mr. Pratt's name, and be the pleasantest sort of existence for so charming a bride, one used to an erudite circle.

WORKER IN CAUSE OF CHARITY

Boston Evening American staff photo of Mrs. Samuel Eliot, who is one of the group sponsoring the Boston appearance of the Belgian Guards Band, April 3, at the Garden.

TO MR. AND MRS. ROYCE GILBERT OF THE HOTEL SHERATON came one of those handsomely done invitations that specially honor certain close friends of the newly made President. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert were asked to attend the inauguration. Ceremonial in Washington, with those who have the privilege of sitting in high places in near proximity to Mr. Hoover as he becomes the new Chief Executive of these United States. Kindred interests, specially engineering and construction work brought Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Hoover into friendship's bond several years ago and so Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert were on the list for one of the precious invitations that went only to a select few.

COMM'DR. EDWARD S. V. BRANDT AND HIS PRETTY, GOLDEN-haired spouse with the golden voice have been guests in town from Newport. They came up specially to attend the Senior Supper Dance and at that smart and exclusive affair appeared with Mrs. Robert Knowles as their hostess. Another out of town guest coming on for the party was Miss Anna Alexandre of New York, and was at the Copley-Plaza with the Henry Purkitt Kidders for her host and hostess.

FLORAL BEAUTIES WITHOUT LIMIT WILL RAVISH THE EYE of those who find Mechanics Building their mecca March 19-23, and who are interested in plants and gardens. Something very special in the way of exhibits and prizes are planned to fittingly celebrate the Centennial Birthday of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Unusual and elaborate effects will be arranged by such masters of the craft as Thomas Roland, whose acacias are famous, and who does a huge acacia forest that reaches to the roof and will be resultantly breath-taking.

ALBERT C. BURRAGE HONORED PRESIDENT OF THIS HONORED society, will wave a magic wand and bring into existence a mammoth tropical garden. And, being famed the wide world over as a grower and collector of that gem of floral delicacy, the orchid, it is quite on the cards that the garden will be a riot of grace and color, alive with the beauties that with each showing bring greater and greater renown to the Burrage name. Mrs. Homer Gage of Shrewsbury plans a lush garden, and Mrs. Sher-man Hoyt of California will do wonders with a great desert garden and a garden of redwoods.

Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dearest Anne:

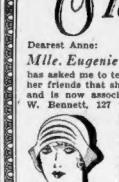
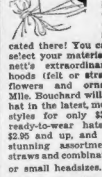
has asked me to tell you and all her friends that she has moved, and is now associated with A. W. Bennett, 127 Tremont St., sixth floor, where she is carrying on her wonderful work of making hats to order and modeling them to the head. What a wonderful advantage having her located there! You can personally select your materials from Bennett's extraordinary stock of hoods (felt or straw, $1.95 up) flowers and ornamenta, and Mlle. Bouchard will fashion your hat in the latest, most distinctive styles for only $3. Bennett's ready-to-wear hats are priced $2.95 and up, and they have a stunning assortment of felts, straws and combinations in large or small headsizes.



How Do They Do It,

Priscilla? How does it happen that Ro-Wear Hats at 79 Summer St. always has the latest, most exclusive styles in their low-priced dresses? Here's the secret, Anne. Barbara Gay, their New York style expert, is ever watching with wary eye for the most tempting styles in high - priced gowns. She then buys the gown (from an exclusive New York house (and copies it in less expensive material for Rollins—And there you are—with the style distinction of an $85 gown in frocks priced as low as from $7.95 to $14.75. That is why you find Rollins' Frock Shop breathing with freshness and variety—especially in their new Spring styles.



Spring Decorating

time is here, Anne. What fun it is "dressing up" your windows with dainty draperies! I really think the best values in curtains and draperies are to be found at Lepie's, 54 Chauncy St., where they are making a special offer of an exceptionally fine deeply ruffled marquisette curtains (plain and dotted), in the charming criss-cross design, for only $1.48. Lepie's also has some adorable 7-piece Cottage Sets with gay-colored flat edges, for only 95 cents, and some tricky designs in overdraperies. Their silk and rayon heart-shaped pillows are rare values at $1.98. It pays to buy at Lepie's.

Back From New York

comes Evelyn (I've missed her, haven't you?) with a gladsome array of sparkling new dresses that spread the beauty and life of Springtime all about her shop. And what dresses! Spritely prints, rich in color! Glowing spring shades, in crepes and georgettes, with perhaps a dash of sun-gold or green. Gorgeous moire and chiffon evening gowns that fairly float with daintiness. Printed ensembles with kasha coats ALL priced at $18.95 and up. And such a collection at $8.95! Higher priced dresses that Evelyn has reduced, and some special values in spicy prints, crepes and georgettes, at Evelyn's Dress Shop, 8 Winter St.

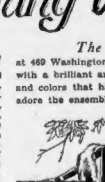
When Bab 'Falls Down' and tears her "bestest" stockings, I just fetch another pair, its cheaper than mending, because I have reduced the kiddie's hosiery expense just about one-half, since I started buying in the Children's Hosiery Department of the Touraine Glove Co. (Avoca St store); says Jean. I bought some really wonderful plaid socks, with turn-down cuffs that can also be turned up—making the sock a long stocking. They come in six assorted colors in tan, gray and blue — excellent quality cotton — really 50 cent values for only 30 cents. Sizes 8-10. The Touraine also has socks and stockings at 15 and 20 cents a pair that are almost unbelievable values.

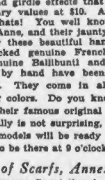
The Hudson Wearing Apparel

at 469 Washington St. has opened its doors to greet the Spring, with a brilliant array of dresses and hats in the smartest styles and colors that have been seen for many days. Don't you just adore the ensemble sketched? It's navy with chartreuse dotted blouse (long sleeves) and detachable jacket. And—best of all—it's priced only $15.75! This is only one of the surprising variety of sensational prints, the much-wanted Middy georgettes and luscious new Spring shades in flat crepe at this price. There is also a swanky array of pert little cape models in prints and plain colors, "hanky" styles and girdle effects that are extraordinary values at $10. And now for the hats! You well know their quality, Anne, and their jaunty style—and now these beautiful hand-made, hand-blocked genuine French Felts, with genuine Ballibunti and Bacou inserted by hand have been sharply reduced to sell for only $3.00!. They come in all headsizes in the newest maze of Spring colors. Do you know that Hudson's alone sold over 20,000 of their famous original French Felts in the last six months? It really is not surprising, as they are phenomenal values. These new models will be ready for you Tuesday morning, Anne. Don't fail to be there at 9 o'clock sharp.



Spring Flies a Banner of Scarfs, Anne!

Never were they more prominent. Dresses flaunt them! Ensembles boast them! Coats and even hats are topped with gay-colored, exotic scarfs—the herald of Spring Fashions. What an inspiring array I saw in Filene's today, in their Scarf Section on the first floor. You know—the few-of-a-kind variety. They are gorgeous, Anne, and most of them have the important new "dressmaker" touch, which shows in their double-facings, appliques and diagonal stripes. The collar-like Chanel scarf, in shaded two-tones and bright Basque colors, even boasts a buttonhole, through which one end can be slipped to hold the scarf securely in place. They are priced at $5 and $8.50. The "steps" of the Staircase scarf, which ties with a bow, are "built" of three contrasting colors, priced $3.50 and $5. Sweetly feminine and unusually practical for early spring is the double Jabot Scarf in two harmonizing colors. Its voluminous folds, cascading gracefully, fill in the "openness" of the new spring coats, and form a charming protection against brisk March winds. Swagger with tweed ensembles are the Cravat Scarfs, made of a combination of varied-colored silk and kasha, priced $6. Of course, there are the popular triangle scarfs, in rainbow array, showing streaks of the new Sun-gold Yellow, priced $2 and up.



"Priscilla Has 'Inaugurated' Me

as a faithful devotee to the Spanish Galleries of Chandler & Co."—so I overheard Aunt Alice telling Helene. You know, Anne, Auntie is a most hard-to-please lady when it comes to clothes. They must be up-to-the-minute in style—fashioned of the best material and, most important of all—agreeable in price! And to Auntie there is no place like the Women's Dress Section of the Spanish Galleries, where all the frocks, though large in size (36 to 46), are distinctively youthful, and fashioned on slenderizing lines. They are priced at $12.75 and $15—and what a gorgeous array to select from. Prints—the fashion of the hour—come in the smartest styles, two-piece with plain combinations, one-piece with yoke hipflines, and many others. Silk crepes in all the beautiful spring shades are stunning with tiers and suave box pleatings. There are some striking navy georgettes—always a favorite—over polka dots and check foundations that are unbelievable values at $15. And just think, Anne, an ensemble, with gayly-printed dress (long sleeves) has a light-colored kasha coat, below-knee length, that can be worn with almost any frock, is also priced at only $15, in the Women's Dress Section of the Spanish Galleries.

Last Call to the Fur Coat "Party"

If you haven't been one of the lucky ones to purchase a fur coat at Scott's Unique Fur Coat "Party," this is your last opportunity, as it is the final week of this extraordinary sale. Hundreds of women from all over New England have been pleasantly surprised to find such rare values, which includes samples, floor models, and slightly used fur coats left out of Scott's workshop—priced from $25 to $95—ridiculously low for final clearance. The "party" is on Scott's—and there are plenty of large sizes included in this sale. They want to sell the entire lot, and this opportunity may never present itself again, so get there as early as you can. Should it be inconvenient for you to pay cash, you may arrange for small weekly or monthly payments while wearing your coat, by joining Scott's Unique Fur Club—the only one in New England. This sale is taking place on the third floor of Scott's building, at 69 Summer St., and at 51 Pratt St., Hartford, Conn.—and don't forget—it is also the final clearance of their one and only Mark-down Sale of new coats. Scott Furriers remain open every evening until 9 o'clock.

It's Quite Smart

to wear eyeglasses now—since the new style white gold ones with the high bridge have come in. In fact, they have become so popular that most folks are having their shell-frame glasses changed for the new white gold rims, which are so much more comfortable, and really add quite a distinguished air! Dr. C. W. Crook, registered optometrist in Gilchrist Optical Shop, will examine your eyes, most carefully, and fit you to a pair of the new white gold (filled) glasses for only $10.75 complete. "Shell" frames are priced as low as $4. Dr. Crook also has the smartest designs in pince-nez and lorgnette styles, very appealingly priced.

I "Archly" Discovered

how Beth maintains than finely-arched appearance of her eyebrows. She has had them "permanently plucked" by our friend, the electric needle specialist, Miss Elizabeth G. Sparkes. I think that's a wonderful idea — more painful than "tweezing," and no more shaggy, unkempt appearance. Miss Sparkes is an expert in removing all kinds of superfluous hair from the face or limbs. Her work is absolutely painless and permanent, and her hands are steady and sure. Miss Sparkes is located at 120 Tremont St., Room 602, and she'll be delighted to discuss your personal hirsute problems with you. Tel. Han. 9572.

School's Begun Again

and is in full swing once more! And Jordan Marsh Company's Dressmaking School has resumed its classes in modern sewing, and is ready to assist you with your spring wardrobe. This will be good news for all the "student dressmakers" who have been so impatiently inquiring when "school would reopen." You may register for classes on the fourth floor, main store. When you "know how" to make your own clothes — the proper way—you can have so many "extras" — lovely things that you ordinarily could not afford to buy—and really, Anne, Jordan's Dressmaking School has turned out some marvelous models.

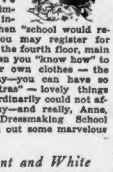
Radiant and White and glowing with perfect cleanliness! Oh, such beautiful skin! But it's Carol's reward to faithfulness to her favorite cleansing cream — Lesquendieu's Creme de Fleurs au Bouquet. She simply wouldn't think of retiring without first gently patting on this marvelous cream. It liquifies instantly, thus eliminating all stretching, which causes wrinkles. It invades the pores, and carries away all the dust and impurities. So soothing, and so refreshing with its fragrant bouquet odor, you surely must try it. Meyer Jonsson Co. carries it exclusively, priced $3, $1.75 and $1.



Would You Believe It,

Anne, there really is something new—that is new to us in Boston! Mme. Rolleau, who designs the original models from which important manufacturers copy their dresses has opened a Salon at 59 Temple Place, Room 806, models not chosen by them, and is offering for sale at very much reduced prices, some as low as $12. Mme. Rolleau has made an extensive study of types and figures and will personally design and make an original frock for you that will best enhance your beauties. Mme. Rolleau's Salon is connected with the famous McDowell School of Dressmaking, and classes are now open in designing, of which Gerald Brown is the instructor.

The Wee D'Or

at 101 Milk St. Salon—Room 300, Tel. Han. 8362, is a charming little hosiery shop, Anne, where they offer the most unusual service, which the short-of-time business girl will just adore. I have never heard of anything like it. First of all, they offer extreme values in stockings, priced from $1.20 to $3 — all the desired shades and weights. If you can't get out, just call them up, and they'll send a messenger with your stockings. They have private booths for changing, and washing facilities with an electric dryer—in case you prefer to rinse new stockings before wearing them. What more could you ask for perfect service? Tel. Han. 8362.

'And Now, My Anne,

let's take a walk up to the Metropolitan Hotel. There is a charming little dress shop there, where I have heard many actresses buy their frocks. Jack Platt, the owner of the Metro Dress Shop, buys all his frocks direct from New York — and they are like a breeze from Fifth Avenue — and astonishingly low in price —$7.75—$9.75 and up. There are gay, girlish styles, with pert bow trimmings—the new tri-color effects in the bright Basque hues, and jersey and crepe combinations to delight you. And not to be overlooked is the splendid stock of pure silk stockings, underwear, perfums and costume jewelry—most irresistibly priced

Devotedly yours,

Priscilla

FOILS DEATH IN AUTO CRASH

Ayer, March 4—William S. Yeager of 65 Talbot ave, Somerville, escaped death by bare inches early today when his sedan was reduced to wreckage in a collision with a freight train at Flanagan's crossing, three miles outside Ayer Junction.

Inefficiency of the automatic danger signal installed at the crossing about a year ago in lieu of a tender, was held responsible for the crash by Chief Patrick Beatey of the Ayer police.

Yeager was lifted from the ruins of his machine by persons in another automobile which arrived at the crossing a few minutes after the crash. Except for a few minor bruises and a shaking up, he was uninjured.

A car needs a home. Have you a garage for rent? Tell about it and give location in the Want Ads. That's the way to fill it.

LEAGUE ACTS ON MINORITIES

Geneva, March 4 (AP)—The 54th session of the Council of the League of Nations opened today with the question of minority peoples dominating topics on the agenda. Signor Scialoja, Italy, sat as president.

The council members met first at a private meeting following shortly afterward by a public conclave.

Valdis Mendsville, Chile's minister at Berne, represented Chile at the council meeting instead of M. Villegas.

The minorities problem probably will bulk large at the Geneva meeting. It was put on the agenda after a sharp debate at a previous session of the council between Streesemann and August Zaleski, the Polish foreign minister, over the situation and acts of Germans residing in what is now Polish territory in Silesia.

Boy Urged to Study Cartooning

By LOUISE RICE
Noted Graphologist

MY friends and I think that I have some talent for cartooning. Having but a high school education, do you sincerely think I could succeed? Also, what do you think of a correspondence school course for cartooning.

PAUL C., Melrose.

I think I have a cartooning in high school—you answered all

Without hesitation I declare that you and your friends are entirely right and that I believe that you will do right to try your hand at cartooning.

But there's a catch in it. The Catch is that I recommend you to allow yourself at least four years in which you become a fair "commercial" artist, but this means that you not only try your hand at cartoons, but at "lay-outs, borders, ornaments, lettering, using the airbrush, seeing what effects you can get out of a camera for advertising literature, writing slogans when asked to do so, "pasting up," touching and otherwise doing all the odds and ends which fall to the prentice hand in any "art shop," as it is the custom to call such places.

As for the mail order course in art, I do not think that hard and fast rules can be made. Some are good, some are not, and some are awful!

Generally speaking, if you live in a large city, it is better to get your training at first hand. Go to night classes, which many of the high schools maintain, or to the local school of design and then get work in the aforesaid art shop, even if it is only to run errands.

You'll not be there long before they will discover that you can be allowed to have a pencil in your hand and after that they'll shove you right along as fast as your study in the school will allow you. I wouldn't go into all this detail, Paul, if I were not sure of your talent, so be encouraged and don't let yourself be turned aside.

NOTE: Send sample of your handwriting to Miss Louise Rice, noted graphologist, for analysis. Write your name and complete address on unruled paper, in ink or pencil. To cover clerical costs enclose 10 cents in silver or stamps. Also enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The individual analysis will be returned to you within a period of one or two weeks. Letters will not be published if sender so requests. Miss Rice has a number of letters which she cannot answer because of wrong or inadequate addresses.

GIGLI SCORES IN SYMPHONY CONCERT

By MOSES SMITH

Beniamino Gigli, leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, sang before an exceptionally enthusiastic audience at Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon. Since the singer had no objections to adding extras during the course of his program, the prodigious applause stretched out a modest list to a two-hour concert. By this time I had lost count of the encores, and the "second concert" at the end of the program was still to come.

Mr. Gigli began his program with "Oh, Paradiso," from Meyerbeer's "L'Africaina," and ended it with "M'appari" from Flotow's "Martha." In the middle came "Una furtiva lagrima" from Donizetti's "Elisir d'Amore." These operatic arias aside, he sang a group of Italian lyrics and another by miscellaneous modern composers. The extras were culled from many schools.

Gigli showed himself a master at singing in light voice, shaping his phrases nicely in the Italian music especially, wafting the tones out without apparent effort. With his equipment Gigli is capable of a far wider range of expression than the average concert tenor.

The quality of some of the songs offered was scarcely of a high order. And the singer did not always treat them with conventional restraint. But perhaps a bad song is best sung badly; at least the audience liked it that way.

Signs of Spring Seen in Women's Events

NOMINATING committees, ballot boxes, fashion shows and the "housecleaning" at the Club Institute, appear this week as harbingers of spring.

Speaking of nominations I heard Mrs. Frederick Glazier Smith give one woman some valuable advice on how to get off on the right foot as club president, at our State Federation meeting.

Mrs. F. G. Smith

"I've refused to accept the presidency for years," the woman said. "But this year they won't take no for my answer. How in the world could I ever fill that office after our wonderful Mrs. Blank?"

"Nonsense," chided Mrs. Smith, one of the popular past presidents of the State organization, who well remembers how her own heart skipped a few beats the first time she was addressed as "madam president" from the floor of the Forthian Club, Somerville, 21 years ago. Mrs. Smith by the way, is attending the inaugural ceremonies in Washington with Dr. Smith today, en route to Florida to visit their daughter.

"Don't coddle an inferiority complex, my dear, nor be too modest to accept club office, for each new responsibility helps you grow and all give you more than you can give the office," she advised.

"In the first place you have personality, which is two-thirds of almost everything, I believe. Your club knows you have ability and it is not fair to it to refuse to accept a nomination when urged. Again, you have had training as a vice-president in your other club, so that you have parliamentary law at your finger-tips.

ADVICE GIVEN

"And parliamentary procedure gives the poise and self-confidence that nothing else can when you first pick up the gavel.

"For the first few meetings have a definite program written out to go by, so you won't forget the business items. Soon you'll find presiding easy. Just go ahead without wondering what others may be thinking, for you must early learn not to mind criticism. Remember no one ever yet has pleased everybody."

Another good tip was for the new president to keep still until after her board has expressed its opinion on measures, so as not to influence the board to act simply because the president wishes it.

"A good president guides the club but never tries to rule it," she explained. "So it is well for a new president to carry out policies begun by a predecessor on measures which must be built up on a foundation already laid. It makes the past president's friends feel better, too, if her policies are not entirely disregarded.

"Study your club and its relations to the community, and before you undertake new community work it is wise to consult the city authorities and other agencies in order not to duplicate their labors."

ABILITY GOVERNS

A further hint for harmonious feeling was contained in the observation that, if you appoint your closest friend to head your departments you may be accused of forming a clique, so choose rather those who differ with you if they have the ability.

HOOVER BEGS AMERICANS TO STOP BUYING BOOTLEG LIQUOR

PLEADS WITH PUBLIC TO HELP HIM ENFORCE 'DRY' LAWS

than ever existed before in the history of the world.

Through liberation from widespread poverty we have reached a higher degree of individual freedom than ever before. The devotion to and concern for our institutions are deep and sincere.

We are steadily building a new race—a new civilization great in its own attainments. The influence and high purposes of our nation are respected among the peoples of the world.

We aspire to distinction in the world, but to a distinction based upon confidence in our sense of justice as well as our accomplishments within our own borders and in our own lives.

For guidance in this great period of recovery the nation is deeply indebted to Calvin Coolidge.

But all this magnificent advance should not obscure the constant dangers from which self-government must be safeguarded. The strong man must at all times be alert to the attack of insidious disease.

The most malign of all these dangers today is disregard and disobedience of law. Crime is increasing. Confidence in rigid and speedy justice is decreasing.

I am not prepared to believe that this indicates any decay in the moral fiber of the American people. I am not prepared to believe that it indicates an impotence of the form of government we have adopted to enforce its laws.

It is only in part due to the additional burdens imposed upon our judicial system by the 18th amendment. The problem is much wider than that. Many influences had increasingly complicated and weakened our law enforcement organization long before the adoption of the 18th amendment.

To re-establish the vigor and effectiveness of law enforcement we must critically consider the entire federal machinery of justice, the redistribution of its functions, the simplification of its procedure, the provision of additional special tribunals, the better selection of juries, and the more effective organization of our agencies of investigation and prosecution that justice may be sure and that it may be swift.

While the authority of the federal government extends to but part of our vast system of national, state and local justice, yet the standards which the federal government establishes have the most profound influence upon the whole structure.

We are fortunate in the ability and integrity of our federal judges and attorneys. But the system under which these officers are called upon to administer is in many respects ill-adapted to present conditions.

Its intricate and involved rules of procedure have become the refuge of both big and little criminals. There is a belief abroad that by invoking technicalities, subterfuge and delay the ends of justice may be thwarted by those who can pay the cost.

Reform, reorganization and strengthening of our whole judicial and enforcement system, both in civil and criminal sides, have been advocated for years by statesmen, judges and bar associations. First steps toward that end should not longer be delayed.

Rigid and expeditious justice is the first safeguard of freedom, the basis of all ordered liberty, the vital force of progress.

It must not come to be in our republic that it can be defeated by the ingenuity of the clever, the exploitation of the delays and entanglements of the law, or by combinations of the lawless.

Justice must not fail because the agencies of enforcement are either inefficient, corrupt or overawed. To consider these evils, to find their remedy, is the most sore necessity of our time.

Of the undoubted abuses which have grown up under the 18th amendment, many are due to the causes I have just mentioned; but part are due to the failure of some states to accept their share of responsibility for concurrent enforcement and to the failure of many state and local officials to accept the obligation under their oath of office zealously to enforce the laws.

With the failure to enforce these many causes has come a dangerous expansion in the criminal elements which have found enlarged opportunities in dealing in illegal liquor.

But a large responsibility rests directly upon our citizens. There would be little traffic in illegal liquor if only criminals patronized it.

We must awake to the fact that the patronage from large numbers of law-abiding citizens is supplying the rewards and stimulating crime

I have been selected by you to execute and enforce the laws of the country. I propose to do so to the extent of my own abilities, but the measure of success that the Government shall attain will depend upon the moral support which you, as citizens, extend.

Duty of Citizens to Help Stamp Out Bootleggers

The duty of citizens to support the laws of the land is co-equal with the duty of their government to enforce the laws which exist.

No greater national service can be given by men and women of good will—who, I know, are not unmindful of the responsibilities of citizenship—than that they should, by their example, assist in stamping out crime and outlawry by refusing participation in and condemning all transactions with illegal liquor.

Our whole system of self-government will crumble either if officials elect what laws they will enforce or citizens elect what laws they will support.

The worst evil of disregard for some law is that it destroys respect for all law. For our citizens to patronize the violation of a particular law on the ground that they are opposed to it is destructive of the very basis of all that protection of life, of home and property which they rightly claim under other laws.

If citizens do not like a law, their duty as honest men and women is to discourage its violation. Their right is openly to work for its repeal.

To those of criminal mind there can be no appeal but vigorous enforcement of the law. Fortunately our people. Their activities must they are but a small percentage of the whole population.

I propose to appoint a national commission for a searching investigation of the whole structure of our federal system of jurisprudence, to include the method of enforcement of the 18th amendment and the causes of abuse under it.

Its purpose will be to make such recommendations for reorganization of the administration of federal laws and court procedure as may be found desirable.

In the meantime it is essential that a large part of the enforcement be stopped.

The election has again confirmed the determination of the American people that regulation of private enterprise and not government ownership or operation is the course rightly to be pursued in our relation to business.

In recent years we have established a differentiation in the whole method of business regulation between the industries which produce and distribute commodities on the one hand, and public utilities on the other.

In the former our laws insist upon effective competition; in the latter, because we substantially confer a monopoly by limiting competition, we must regulate their services and rates.

Regulation the Basis for Equal Opportunity

The rigid enforcement of the laws applicable to both groups is the very base of equal opportunity and freedom from domination for all our people, and it is just as essential for the stability and prosperity of business itself as for the protection of the public at large.

Such regulation should be extended by the federal government within the limitations of the Constitution only when the individual states are without power to protect their citizens through their own authority.

On the other hand, we should be fearless when the authority rests only in federal government.

The larger purpose of our economic thought should be to establish firmly stability and security of business and employment and thereby remove that capacity for co-operation among themselves to effect high purposes in public welfare.

It is an advance toward the highest conception of self-government. Self-government is not and should not imply the use of political agencies alone.

Progress is born of co-operation in the community—not from governmental restraints. The government should assist and encourage these movements of collective self help by its co-operating with them.

Business has, by co-operation, made great progress in the advancement of service, in stability, in regularity of employment and in the correction of its own abuses. Such progress, however can continue only so long as business manifests its respect for law.

There is an equally important field of co-operation by the federal government with the multitude of agencies, state, municipal and private, in the systematic development of those processes which directly affect public health, recreation, education and home life.

We have need further to perfect the means by which government can be adapted to human service.

Although education is primarily a responsibility of the states and local communities and rightly so, yet the nation as a whole is vitally concerned in its development everywhere to the highest standards and to complete universality. Self-government can succeed only through an instructed electorate.

Our objective is not simply to overcome illiteracy. The nation has marched far beyond that. The more complex the activities of the nation become, the greater is the need for more and more advanced training.

Moreover as our numbers increase and as our life expands with science and invention, we must discover more and more leaders for every walk of life.

We cannot hope to succeed in directing this increasingly complex civilization unless we can draw all the talent of leadership from the whole people.

One civilization after another has been wrecked upon the attempt to secure sufficient leadership from a ruling group or class.

If we would prevent the growth of class distinctions and would constantly refresh our leadership with the ideals of our people, we must draw constantly from the general mass.

The full opportunity for every boy and girl to rise through the selective processes of education can alone secure to us this leadership.

In public health the discoveries of science have opened a new era. Many sections of our country and many groups of our citizens suffer from diseases the eradication of which are mere matters of administration simply involving expenditure.

Public health service should be as fully organized and as universally incorporated into our governmental system as is public education.

Th returns are a thousandfold in economic benefits, and infinitely more in reduction of suffering and promotion of human happiness.

The United States fully accepts the American truth that our own progress, prosperity and peace are interlocked with the progress, prosperity and peace of all humanity.

The whole world is at peace. The dangers to a continuation of this peace today are largely that fear and suspicion which still haunt the world. No suspicion or fear can be rightly directed toward our country.

Those who have a true understanding of America know that we have no desire for territorial expansion, no economic or other domination of other peoples. Such purposes are repugnant to our ideals of human freedom.

Our form of government is ill adapted to the responsibilities which inevitably follow permanent limitation of the independence of other peoples.

Superficial observers seem to find no destiny for our abounding increase in population, in wealth and in knowledge that of imperialism.

They fail to see that the American people are engrossed in the building within themselves of a new economic system, a new social system, a new political system—all of which are characterized by aspirations of freedom of opportunity and thereby are the negation of imperialism.

They fail to realize that because of our abounding prosperity our youth are pressing more and more into our institutions of learning; that our people are seeking a larger culture through art, literature, science and travel; that they are moving toward stronger moral and spiritual life—that from these things our sympathies are broadening beyond the bounds of our own land and race toward their true expression in a real brotherhood of man.

Anti-War Pact, League of Nations and World Court

They fail to see that the idealism of America will lead it to no narrow or selfish channel, but inspire it to do its full share as a nation toward the advancement of civilization.

It will do that not by mere declaration, but by taking a practical part in supporting all useful international undertakings.

We not only desire peace with the world, but to see peace maintained throughout the world. We wish to advance the reign of justice and reason toward the extinction of force.

The recent treaty for the renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy sets an advanced standard in our conception of the relations of nations. Its acceptance should pave the way to greater limitation of armament, the offer of which we sincerely extend to the world.

But its full realization also implies a greater and greater perfection in the instrumentalities for pacific settlement of controversies between nations.

In the creation and use of these instrumentalities we should support every sound method of conciliation, arbitration and judicial settlement.

American statesmen were among the first to propose and they have constantly urged upon the world the establishment of a tribunal for the settlement of controversies of a justiciable character.

The Permanent Court of International Justice in its major purpose is thus peculiarly identified with American ideals and with American statesmanship.

No more potent instrumentality for this purpose has ever been conceived and no other is practicable of establishment.

The reservations placed upon our adherence should not be misinterpreted.

The United States seeks by these reservations no special privilege or advantage, but only to clarify our relation to advisory opinions and others matters which are subsidiary to the major purpose of the court.

The way should, and I believe will, be found by which we may take our proper place in a movement so fundamental to the progress of peace.

Our people have determined that we should make no political engagements such as membership in the League of Nations, which may commit us in advance as a nation to become involved in the settlements of controversies between other countries.

They adhere to the belief that the independence of America from such obligations increases its ability and availability for service in all fields of human progress.

I have lately returned from a journey among our sister republics of the Western hemisphere. I have received unbounded hospitality and courtesy as their expression of friendliness to our country.

We are held by particular bonds of sympathy and common interest with them. They are of like mind building a racial character and culture which is an impressive contribution to human progress.

We wish only for the maintenance of their independence, the growth of their stability and their prosperity.

New World Is Free From Old National Jealousies

While we have had wars in the Western hemisphere yet on the whole the record is in encouraging contrast with that of other parts of the world.

Fortunately the new world is largely free from the inheritances of fear and distrust which have so troubled the old world. We should keep it so.

It is impossible, my countrymen, to speak of peace without profound emotion. In thousands of homes in America, in millions the world around the world, there are vacant chairs. It would be a shameful confession of our unworthiness if it should develop that we have abandoned the hope for which all these men died.

Surely civilization is old enough, surely mankind is mature enough, so that we ought in our own lifetime to find a way to permanent peace.

Abroad, to west and east, are nations whose sons mingled their blood with the blood of our sons on the battlefield

Most of these nations have contributed to our race, to our culture, our knowledge and our progress.

From one of them we derive our very language and from many of them much of the genius of our institutions. Their desire for peace is as deep and sincere as our own.

Peace can be contributed to by respect for our ability in defense. Peace can be promoted by the limitation of arms and by the creation of the instrumentalities for peaceful settlement of controversies. But it will become a reality only through self-restraint and active effort in friendliness and helpfulness.

I covet for this administration a record of having further contributed to advance the cause of peace.

In our form of democracy the expression of the popular will can be effected only through the instrumentality of political parties We maintain party government only to promote intolerant partisanship but because opportunity must be had for expression of the popular will, and organization provided for the execution of its mandates and for accountability to government to the people.

It follows that the government both in the executive and legislative branches must carry out in good faith the platforms upon which the party was entrusted with power.

But the government is that of the whole people; the party is the instrument through which policies are determined and chosen to bring them into being.

Platforms are promises of elections should have no place in our government for government must contain itself alone with the common weal.

Action upon some of the proposals upon which the Republican party was returned to power, particularly further agricultural relief and limited changes in the tariff, cannot in justice to our farmers, our labor and our manufacturers be postponed.

I shall therefore request a special session of Congress for the consideration of these two questions, I shall deal with each of them upon the assembly of Congress.

It appears to me that the more important further mandates from the recent election were the maintenance of the integrity of the Constitution; the vigorous enforcement of the laws; the continuance of economy in public expenditure; the continued regulation of business to prevent domination in the community, denial of ownership or operation of business by the government in competition with its citizens.

Avoidance of policies which would involve us in the controversies of foreign nations.

More effective reorganization of the departments of the federal government; expansion of public works and promotion of welfare activities affecting education and the home.

These ideals and aspirations are the touchstones upon which the day to day administration and legislative acts of government must be tested; more than this, the government must, so far as lies within its proper powers, give leadership to the realization of these ideals and to the fruition of these aspirations.

No one can adequately reduce these things of the spirit to phrase or to a catalogue of definitions.

We all know what the attainment of these ideals should be. The preservation of self-government and its full foundations in local government; the perfection of justice whether in economic or in social field; the maintenance of ordered liberty; the denial of domination by any group or class; the building up and preservation of equality of opportunity; the stimulation of initiative and individuality; absolute integrity in public affairs; the choice of officials for fitness to office; the direction of economic progress toward prosperity and the further lessening of poverty; the freedom of public opinion; the sustaining of education and of the advancement of knowledge; the growth of religious spirit and the toleration of all faiths; the strengthening of the home; the advancement of peace.

U. S. People Must Share Executive Responsibility

There is no short road to the realization of these aspirations. Ours is progressive people, but with a determination that progress must be based upon the foundation of experience.

Ill-considered remedies for our faults bring only penalties upon them. But if we hold the faith of the men in our mighty past who founded this nation, we shall make them heightened and strengthened for our children.

This is not the time and place for extended discussion. The questions before our country are problems of progress to higher standards; they are not the problems of degeneration. They demand thought and they serve to quicken the conscience and enlist our sense of responsibility for their settlement.

And that responsibility rests upon you, my countrymen, as much as upon those of us who have been selected for office.

Ours is a land rich in resources; stimulating in its glorious beauty, filled with millions of happy homes; blessed with comfort and opportunity. In no nation are the institutions of progress more advanced.

In no nation is the government more worthy of respect. No country is more loved by its people. I have an abiding faith in their capacity, integrity and high purpose. I have no fears for the future of our country. It is bright with hope.

In the presence of my countrymen, mindful of the solemnity of this occasion, knowing what the task means and then responsibility which it involves, I beg your tolerance, your aid and your co-operation. I ask the help of Almighty God in this service to my country to which you have called me.

Stewart Believed Beaten in Oil Fight

Chicago, March 4 (AP)—The Herald and Examiner today said it was able "to state on highest authority" that Gov. Robert W. Stewart will not have enough votes to be re-elected a director of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana at the stockholders meeting Thursday, and, therefore, will fail of re-election as chairman of the board

The newspaper adds that its authority declares Ed G. Seubert now president, will be elected chairman to succeed Stewart.'

CURTIS CALLS ON SENATE TO CO-OPERATE

Washington, March 4 (INS)—The text of Vice-President Curtis' speech follows in part:

"Senators: The United States Senate is today one of the most distinguished legislative bodies in the world—one of the greatest actual and potential powers for the promotion and advancement of civilization. Its personnel is of a calibre equal to if not the superior of any previous body heretofore assembled. Any discussion of matter how outstanding in the realms of leadership, political or otherwise, might well be proud to preside over its deliberations. I may, therefore, be pardoned in addressing here the feeling of pride which I experience that through my election as Vice-President of the United States such a signal honor has come to me. I hope I may prove worthy of the people's choice, and of you.

TRIBUTE TO DAWES.

"At this point I may with propriety, I think, be permitted to offer to the honorable gentleman who is retiring as presiding officer of this body, Mr. Dawes, an expression of appreciation, admiration and esteem. We will all agree that he has filled his station and frequently onerous duties with credit and distinction.

"It would seem fitting also to offer a word of welcome and greeting to new Senators. They will find their fellow Senators as I have found them, most human and kindly gentlemen willing and anxious to help newcomers.

"My service among you has impressed me with the responsibilities of every Senator and given me a clear understanding of the duties and obligations of the Vice-President.

DEFINES HIS DUTIES.

"Assisted by your full co-operation without which little can be done, I hope to be able to sense your desire certainly and surely to obey your will, which is the will of the people; to give it effect with the utmost dispatch; and to expedite the business of the Senate in an orderly and speedy manner, for this, I take it, is not only your desire but also the wish of our people.

"To do these things within the limits of my abilities I conceive to be the whole scope and duties of the Vice-President. The task is not easy. I ask your help and indulgence.

"With a whole-hearted spirit of co-operation between us I am certain your achievements in the Congress before us will redound to the immediate and ultimate good of all; your proceedings will stand for years in the future as the highest mark of statesmanship endeavors within and perhaps without the United States. It gives me pleasure, sir, to welcome the gentleman you, and to take over the duties of the Vice-President."

REBELS CLAIM CONTROL OF 8 STATES

Rurales until daybreak to surrender peacefully.

As troops were brought here from loyal states to reinforce the Mexico City garrison, other combat contingents were prepared for departure to the states of Vera Cruz and Sonora, where the revolt appeared to center, as strict censorship was established.

Vera Cruz and Sonora have been taken over—apparently without bloodshed—by the rebel forces in Vera Cruz under the command of Gen. Jesus Maria Aguirre, until yesterday chief of military operations there, and in Sonora by Gen. Francisco Manzo, military chief. Governor Fausto Topete and Gen. Manuel Aguirre, brother of Jesus Aguirre, joined with Manzo.

Ambassador Morrow cut short his week-end at Cuernavacan and dashed back to the capital to be reunited with his family and prospective son-in-law, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The Morrows arrived here in two automobiles and while neither had any special guards, no trouble was encountered during the forty-mile trip. Colonel Lindbergh, still using only his left hand, had his right arm in a sling ever since his "mishap" of last week, drove one car. He made the trip in an hour and a half, which is exceedingly good time.

Anne Morrow, his fiancee, and her sister, Elizabeth, sat beside him in the front seat. Ambassador Morrow was in a second car.

In a statement to Mexico City newspapers President Portes Gil expressed confidence his government would survive the revolt.

"The government is sure it possesses strength sufficient to dominate the revolution in a short time," he said, "not only because the greater part of the army has remained loyal but because in districts where the revolt has broken out there are parts of the country which have not joined the rebels. Moreover, the government is confident it has the force of public opinion with it."

That agreement exists as to the exact cause of the outbreak, President Portes Gil's statement says it is the result of disgruntled military leaders who wished to impose their choice for the presidency upon the country at the elections next November.

EIGHT STATES INVOLVED.

While there has been no pronouncement to that effect, it is understood the movement favors the candidacy of Gilberto Valenzuela, former Mexican minister to Great Britain, who has been outspoken in his denunciation of President Portes Gil and Gen. Calles.

Gen. Jesus M. Aguirre, former personal friend of Gen. Obregon, and a native Sonoran, appeared to be leader of the rebellion. Dispatches from Sonora indicated that Gov. Fausto Topete acknowledged his command.

Despite the rebel claims, the scope of the movement was in some doubt. Rebel pronunciamentos claimed collusion of eight states: Vera Cruz, Sonora, Oaxaca, Sinaloa, Nayarit, Coahuila, Chihuahua and Durango.

Outside of the victories in Vera Cruz and Sonora there were no definite reports of defections in other states, although reports of rebel control of the isthmus of Tehuantepec might imply Oaxaca had revolted.

The government announcement of departure of Gen. Gonzalo Escobar from Torreon was construed as denial of former reports of his defection.

U. S. "Marks Time" in Mexican Revolution

Washington, March 4 (AP)—The revolutionary movement in various parts of Mexico was being fully reported to the American Government today by Ambassador Morrow at Mexico City and by consular officers at various Mexican cities on the border and elsewhere.

An action on the part of the United States at this time was felt to be unnecessary and, unless the American towns and cities on the border were threatened there would be no need of stationing American troops in those places.

Troops and Planes Leave for Sonora

Nogales, Ariz., March 3 (AP)—From sources considered reliable here, it was announced tonight that a troop train has left Mexico City for Nogales, Sonora, accompanied by a squadron of army pursuit airplanes to be used in an attempt to wrest Nogales from rebel troops, who took the city this afternoon.

Control of the Southern Pacific of Mexico Railroad as far south as Guaymas, Sonora, half way down the Gulf of California has been obtained by the revolutionists, their leaders declared.

Several cases of ammunition were seized today taken from the seized Federal custom house here tonight. They were carried away in automobiles.

Troops Prepare to Move on Vera Cruz

Mexico City, March 4 (AP)—Official announcement was made early today that a strong military force was being organized to combat the rebel movement in the state of Vera Cruz. It was announced also that Gen. Gonzalo Escobar, chief of military operations in the state of Coahuila, already had started for Mexico City with reinforcements for the garrison here.

This latter phase of the announcement served as official denial of rumors that Coahuila had joined the rebel movement.

FIGHT AGAINST DRUG EVIL TO CONTINUE

By KENNETH CLARK

Washington, March 4—"We have not yet begun to fight."

Paraphrasing John Paul Jones immortal words, Senate and House leaders have announced their efforts would be renewed in the special session, starting a month hence, to have Congress investigate the perils of the dope traffic.

Authorization of an inquiry at this session, which dies at noon today, was blocked by objections of Representative Stephen G. Porter, New York, chairman of the House rules committee. He exerted his influence to defeat the House voting on the LaGuardia-Wheeler joint resolution.

The Senate unanimously endorsed the project, with Vice-President-elect Curtis and Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic chief, leading the fight.

"I am disappointed that the investigation of this diabolical and serious problem was not authorized now," said Senator King, Democrat, of Utah, who drafted the favorable report on the resolution for the Senate judiciary committee.

"In slightly more than a month the Congress will return in special session. I feel confident the inquiry will be authorized then.

"I am sure I speak the opinion of the Senate when I say that the plain duty of Congress to take the most drastic steps to curb this evil which is threatening the social and economic welfare of the nation."

If Snell remains obdurate, it was indicated in senatorial circles that a demand would be made for an investigation by the Senate itself. Belief was expressed that such a proposal would be enthusiastically approved, inasmuch as the Senate already is on record for the probe.

Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, and Representative LaGuardia, Republican, of New York, authors of the resolution, promised to support him in the effort in April to obtain an investigation. Other senators and representatives pledged their support.

"It is time the country should arm itself to break up the piratical traffic in drugs," said Wheeler.

From another angle, Representative Porter, Republican, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House foreign affairs committee, will attack the opening menace in the new Congress. He will seek action on his resolution calling upon the President to send protests to European nations which are not living up to the terms of the 1912 Hague opium convention to suppress the international traffic. He was chairman of the American delegation which withdrew from the 1925 Geneva opium conference because the powers declined to adopt effective measures to control over-production and manufacture of dangerous drugs.

'Near Tyranny' to Fix Insurance Cost

By FRANK A. GOODWIN

Former Registrar of Motor Vehicles and author of the Goodwin-Boston Evening American automobile insurance bill.

THE one big argument in favor of the State fund compulsory insurance bill is this:

If the Commonwealth of Massachusetts orders its car owners to buy a service, specifically defines what that service shall be, fixes the price to be paid to private business concerns, which price includes commissions, exorbitant overhead and profits, then we are approaching pretty close to a tyranny.

The car owners of the State have never objected to the compulsory financial responsibility idea; they believe that every owner should be able to pay for damages caused by him, but they object to being subject to extortion under compulsion of the State.

Ex-Governor Channing H. Cox on June 6, 1924, said:

"I have never believed that the State ought to compel its citizens to purchase insurance policies from liability companies when premiums for such policies involve a considerable payment for agents' commissions. If the State is to compel such action then it should provide that such policies should be furnished at cost, or it should establish a State Fund for this purpose."

COST OVER MILLION

Now what is the answer to this argument by those opposed to our bill?

First—They say that car owners may now buy at cost from any mutual company. Let me dispose of that argument with these figures, furnished by the mutual companies under oath to the insurance commissioner.

"In 1927 mutuals wrote $4,837,562 compulsory liability, and paid out $3,183,921. This, of course, includes the Car Owners' Mutual."

It must be apparent that this "mutual at cost" argument will not hold water, but the insurance interests have another argument to combat, the unanswerable statement of the Governor Cox. In their little booklet of instructions to brokers and agents containing arguments to use on representatives and senators appears the following:

INSURANCE 'BUNK'

"We are compelled by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to do many things made necessary by clothing usually worn by our own sex. We have been compelled to have a certain type of headlights and brakes on our automobiles. In the erection of houses we are compelled to use a certain type of fire-resisting shingles as fire prevention, but no one has ever suggested that Massachusetts should go into the clothing business, the headlight or brake business or the manufacture of fire-resisting shingles and sell these products at cost to its citizens."

I wonder if this is the kind of bunk the insurance lobby has been feeding our legislators during all these years they have been getting away with whatever they wanted. Just see how ridiculous this argument is.

Let us take first the clothes. Yes, the State says we must wear clothes, but does it say how much we shall wear, what kind, or more important, does it tell us what price we shall pay?

REFUTES ARGUMENT

There is only one kind of an insurance policy you can buy and the form of the policy is fixed by the State and price is fixed by State even to the allowance of so much for commissions and profits.

Is there any comparison between clothes and policies?

Then take headlights, taillights, brakes, etc. The State does not specify what kind you must buy for any kind or make is all right if it performs its function required to provide safe operation. The important thing is that the State does not fix the price you must pay.

While I am opposed to government going into business if it interferes with private initiative, there is no longer private initiative in connection with compulsory insurance it has become government compulsion.

In no other instance that I know of does the State order its citizens to buy a certain commodity or service from private individuals and autocratically fix the price its citizens must pay. As Governor Cox so well said:

"If the State is to compel such action, then it should provide that such policies should be furnished at cost or it should establish a state fund for this purpose."

HOOVER SEEKS COURT REFORM FOR DRY LAW

He recognized American aversion to the League of Nations by observing that "our people have determined that we should make no political entanglements such as membership in the League of Nations."

He declared this country seeks no territorial expansion, and no domination of other peoples, whether in this hemisphere or any other.

"Such purposes," he said, "are repugnant to our ideals of human freedom."

"LET BUSINESS ALONE"

To American business he spoke reassuring words. Quoting a policy of his administration, he said, will be to let business alone. The election, he observed, "has again confirmed the determination of the American people that regulation and not Government ownership is the course rightly to be pursued."

"The larger purpose of our economic thought," he declared, "should be to establish and firmly stability and security of business and employment and thereby increase the power to still further from our borders."

Comparatively brief references to tariff revision and farm relief were made with formal announcement of the president's intention to call a special session of Congress to deal with them.

Senator Harrison Calls Hoover's Address Weak

Washington, March 4—"The message of the new President is well constructed and beautifully worded, but the most pleasing feature of it is its brevity," said Senator Pat Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi. "It is an array of well-phrased generalities, avoiding controversial matters and to which most Americans can subscribe.

"He pays a fine tribute to the cause of world peace and the desire of our government and our people for peace, very properly he avoids any friction in the beginning of his administration by endorsing this government's reservations touching our entrance into the "World Court."

"In views of Mr. Hoover with reference to what this government should do with respect to the Court of Nations as compared to his former position represent a complete somersault.

"The address in this particular bears little resemblance to those wonderful speeches written by him and pronouncements made by him in the beginning of the memorable campaign of last summer. Following his marriage to the Republican Party, he seems now to have submitted to the high ideals so ably professed and expounded by him when he had not become wedded to Republicanism, but yet was flirting with Miss Democracy.

"The message is woefully lacking in any definite suggestion for American co-operation in the matter of limitation of naval armaments, and is wholly devoid of any expression of views respecting hasty cruiser construction.

"While pleasing to the ear, the message as a whole is weak and negative as to specific recommendations and recognition of the real pressing problems before the country."

DAWES TAKES A PARTING SHOT AT SENATORS

Washington, March 4 (AP)—The 17th Congress ended quietly today, its passing overshadowed by the spectacle of a Presidential inauguration.

At 10 o'clock the House assembled in a chamber filled with empty seats and galleries. At 11 Vice-President Dawes called the Senate to order for the last time.

A few minor measures were before the House on this last day of its session and the membership took turns in eulogizing those who answered the roll call for the last time.

PRAISES CURTIS.

Just before the arrival at the Capitol of the inaugural party, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for Vice-President in the last campaign, arose on the floor to praise Mr. Curtis, his old friend and political rival.

"He has to his credit a long record of usefulness in both houses of Congress," said Robinson.

Dawes arose to pay him a deserved tribute.

"We few best traditions of the Senate will be preserved and continued during his service as presiding officer of this body."

With the end of the Robinson eulogy, Senator Bingham, Republican, Connecticut, called up the bill to postpone the effective date of the national origins clause of the immigration act. This had been advocated by President-elect Hoover.

HOUSE GETS BUSY

Meanwhile, the House finally got down to business and adopted a Senate resolution to authorize the creation of a joint congressional committee to investigate the control of aircraft for national defense. The committee was authorized to hold hearings and report its findings to Congress.

Amid impressive surroundings in the historic Senate chamber where he had served for years as his party's leader, Charles Curtis, the newly designated Vice-President, descendant of French, English and Kaw Indian blood, was sworn into office in the presence of his chief-to-be, Herbert Hoover, and his departing chief, Calvin Coolidge.

DAWES' FAREWELL

The ceremony was a prelude to the inauguration of Mr. Hoover as President half an hour later. It drew to the Capitol thousands of old friends of the Kansan and of the departing Vice-President Dawes.

Immediately after the administration of the oath, Mr. Dawes delivered a brief farewell address reminiscent of that which he delivered four years ago in denunciation of Senate rules.

"I want to express my heartfelt gratitude to the Senate and members of the Senate for their courtesy to me," he said, in a calm, strident voice.

"I take back nothing," he shouted as the chamber roared with applause and laughter, and Dawes himself smiled at his benediction.

"I could not be true to myself if I did not speak again on the collective errors of this great deliberative body."

Curtis' speech, brief and friendly, carried the spirit of comradie for his colleagues. In it he said the Senate was master of the rules which Mr. Dawes had fought so bitterly.

Curtis banged the gavel sharply as he took over the chair at the end of the benediction by the Senate chaplain.

His work over, Mr. Dawes walked down and took a place on the presidential row facing the chamber.

Experts to Hear War Debt Reports

Paris, March 4 (AP)—The experts on reparations planned today at their first plenary session in a week to take stock of what the sub-committees, formal and informal, had accomplished.

A formal report is understood to embody the findings of the informal bankers' committee, containing besides its chairman, Lord Revelstoke, J. P. Morgan, Thomas W. Lamont, Emile Moreau and others.

It is expected the Germans during the coming week will make some concrete kind of proposals on which the experts may reach the differing or real point of contention between the two groups.

Baby's Crib Enters White House First Time in 20 years

Washington, March 4—For the first time in a score of years there will be a baby's crib in the White House.

Just as President and Mrs. Coolidge are leaving the executive mansion for the last time, baby twins—cribs, toys, clothes—will be moving in.

For Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., son and daughter-in-law of the new President, will be White House guests with their two babies.

TWO CABINETS, OLD AND NEW, AT CAPITAL

Washington, March 4 (INS)—They're coming and going in Washington today—the Hoovers coming, the Coolidges going.

Every member of the new Hoover Cabinet save Henry L. Stimson, the Secretary of State-to-be, was on hand for the inauguration, as were all members of the Coolidge Cabinet.

Three of the Coolidge Cabinet will carry on for the time being—A. W. Mellon as Secretary of the Treasury, James J. Davis as Secretary of Labor and Frank B. Kellogg as Secretary of State. Davis will serve only for a year and Kellogg for a month, until Stimson's arrival from the Philippines. Mellon's tenure is not definite, but probably will not exceed two years.

As for the rest of the Coolidge Cabinet, they will scatter to their respective private pursuits.

Postmaster-General New is going to catch up on his fishing at Turtle lake, Mich., where he has a lodge.

Secretary of War Davis is going abroad.

Atty.-Gen. Sargent is going back to the little town in Vermont that he likes.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine starts to work as chief adviser to the Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association.

Secretary of Commerce Whiting returns to Holyoke, Mass., and his paper mills.

Secretary of Interior West goes back to his law business in Chicago.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur will return to California as a judge—he hopes. President Coolidge appointed him, but the Senate failed to confirm him. President Hoover is expected to reappoint him.

Curtis Can't Give Children the Dodge

Washington, March 4—As he climbed into his car for the inaugural parade, the Vice-President Curtis stopped for a moment to shake hands with a little girl whose mother thrust her forward from the crowd.

The Vice-President-elect reached the White House at 10:20 o'clock, just as members of the Cabinet were assembling.

GEST PRAISES HOOVER AID TO RUSSIA

Morris Gest, world renowned producer, was jubilant in Boston today.

"This is the greatest holiday in my life," he said, "for Herbert Hoover, the man whose work as food administrator in Russia resulted in the saving of the lives of my father and mother and 19 other relatives, has received the highest honor within the gift of the nation.

"Early in 1922, when conditions were terrible in that country, Hoover was disgusted with Russia. I introduced him to the cast of 'Chauve-Souris' and gave him an opportunity to study the Russian character. As we left the company President Hoover was visibly moved.

"Taking me by the arm he said, 'Gest, there won't be a baby hungry in Russia.' He kept his word. I am grateful to Herbert Hoover. Today we have a President who is a friend of the friendless and help to the helpless."

Mr. Gest said that he never felt better in his life than today. He had planned to attend the Hoover inauguration in Washington, but abandoned this to be present at the opening of his production in this city tonight.

"Silence Is Golden"—is truly spoken of Classified Want Ads—no noise, but they make a lot of stir—called Results.

PELLEY PLANS CO-OPERATION WITH INDUSTRY

Constant co-operation with New England industry in general and with the textile industry in particular will be the aim of John J. Pelley, newly elected president of the N. Y., N. H. & Hartford Railroad, who is in Boston today, making this city his headquarters during an inspection of the road throughout New England.

The new executive, who has just rounded out his 30th year in the railroad business, declared himself satisfied with the personnel and equipment of the road and stated that no drastic change is contemplated in service or policies.

Mr. Pelley began his career as a railroad man in his home town in Alma, Illinois, as a station clerk at a salary of $35 per month. He explained that he took the job in the summer of 1899 intending to return to the University of Illinois in the fall of that year.

His father's death, however, forced hi mto alter his plans and he continued to work in the little station until a promotion came with $10 monthly increase in wages.

He went to Carbondale, Ill., where he was appointed a regular clerk. He rose rapidly and in 1908 was appointed president of the Central R. R. of Georgia, a branch of the Illinois Central which is regarded as a training ground for chief executives.

He summed up his career frankly by saying, "I always believed it was just luck and happening to be in the right place at the right time.

"For the time being I will content myself with looking over the holdings of the road in this section," he continued. "As far as I have observed there is a healthy spirit in the organization. Our equipment and lines are in excellent condition.

"The road had plenty of capacity and we can easily handle much more business than we are handling at present. Of course, we will go after all the new business we can get and this means that we must give every assistance to the textile industry.

"While my headquarters will remain at New Haven I intend to come to Boston frequently and I shall spend much time with our industrial department here in order to give greater service to New England business."

30 Killed in Sofia Arsenal Explosion

Sofia, Bulgaria, March 4 (AP)—Thirty persons were killed and 20 seriously injured today in a terrific explosion at the Sofia arsenal. Heavy material damage was caused by the blast, which was in the fuse section.

GIVE 'DANCING BARBER' EXTRA DAY OF LIFE

George E. H. Taylor, "Dancing Barber," condemned to die this week for the murder of Stella Kaie at Salisbury Beach, has at least 24 hours more of life, Warden James L. Hogsett announced today.

The warden declared the murderer will not die tonight, and refused to state whether or not the execution will take place tomorrow night. He added that he had not yet notified Taylor that he is to die in the electric chair, despite reports to the contrary.

Although under the law the warden can set the execution for any night this week, it has been customary in the past to have them take place on Monday night. It is believed that the delay is due to the inability of the executioner to get here from New York.

Taylor's good spirits were some what dashed by the news that Governor Allen had refused to intervene in his case. Nevertheless his to prison officials he is not repinning.

Today after Rev. William Bradley Whitney, chapain, had spent half an hour with him, during which the condemned man besought his personal prayers, Taylor ordered fried oysters, French-fried potatoes, ice cream, pie and coffee for his noon meal and ate heartily.

APPETITE FAILS TO SAVE HIM

Playing hungry without the appetite to back up the role landed Clarence F. Thomas, 28, of Atlanta, Ga., in jail today on a vagrancy charge.

Looking very shabby and woe-begone, Thomas asked a philanthropic-appearing North Cambridge policeman for "a nickel for a cup of coffee." The pedestrian happened to be Inspector Franklin O'Neill of the Cambridge police.

"Here's all the change I've got," O'Neill said, giving the hungry pan-handler 20 cents. "Come on into the restaurant here, though, and I'll stake you to a feed."

"Sorry, I ain't got time," refused Thomas.

"Well, you'll have to give me a minute, now," snapped the inspector. He backed the "down-and-outer" against a wall and searched him. In a back pocket Thomas had a double handful of silver coins, O'Neill testified today and in his stockings he had $35 in bills.

Judge Arthur P. Stone of East Cambridge court held the prisoner in $2000.

Presidents, Old and New, Early Risers

Washington, March 4 (AP)—All of the principals in the day's long procession of inaugural events were stirring while many of the city's guests were still sound asleep.

President Coolidge and Mr. Hoover both were up shortly after 7 o'clock, and by the retiring master of the White House was at his desk in the executive offices, clearing away the last work of his administration.

British Arsenal at Woolwich in Blast

London, March 4—Several employes of the Woolwich arsenal were injured by an explosion and fire this afternoon.

A large number of fire engines were immediately rushed to the arsenal. Causes of the explosion have not yet been determined.

Maine Man Is 91

Skowhegan, March 4 — Darius Hanslin Bartlett, Skowhegan's oldest citizen, observed his 91st birthday at his home by entertaining neighbors and friends.

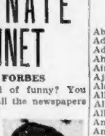
HOOVER WILL DOMINATE CABINET

By B. C. FORBES

Isn't this kind of funny? You will recall that all the newspapers told you before the presidential nomination that Wall Street didn't want Hoover. Now Hoover's inauguration is hailed by Wall Street as callin for a wild demonstration of bullish exuberance.



B. C. Forbes

Almost two months ago a member of the Durant group of operators said to me:

"Don't sell before the inauguration. You can look for a demonstration in honor of Mr. Hoover's entering the White House. It might be well to take advantage of such demonstration to turn paper into cash."

Well, the demonstration is on. Each individual must decide for himself whether to take advantage of it for cash in profits or hold in the hop- of seeing the market continue to soar upwards like a rocket. The writer is not disposed to go into debt to climb for stocks which have been marked up extraordinarily spectacularly.

What kind of a President is Herbert Hoover likely to make.

First of all, it can be concluded that he will be the most actively executive, that he will dominate his cabinet, that he will be the real boss.

The caliber of the new men chosen for cabinet portfolios indicates, in a sense, that Mr. Hoover possesses self-reliance President Harding, less strongly equipped to run what is in many respects the greatest business organization in the world, chose veritable giants from the world of affairs as his chief lieutenants. Some of them towered over Harding as prominent executives, not one of Herbert Hoover's new aides towers over him.

In a greater degree than any predecessor, President Hoover combines infinite sympathy with underdogs and brilliant business ability born of worldwide experience.

Few men have ever been in closer grips with human distress. He has been an eye-witness of the worst of human tragedies—starvation, homelessness, wreck and ruin. He could not have accomplished what he has accomplished to relieve human woes had his heart not been in his work.

Can it not be confidently concluded by the great mass of ordinary folks in this country that their interests will not be sacrificed by Herbert Hoover as the chief executive of the nation?

The business world and the financial world, despite all pronouncements, opposes inconsolute trust in him. The most they have ever expected from other presidents was non-interference with their activities. From President Hoover they expect more.

They expect him to originate and vigorously support ideas, and projects for the further development of America's resources and the upbuilding of national prosperity.

During the Hoover administration railway consolidations, as recommended in principle by the transportation act of 1920, are expected to be made definite. It is figured that he will seek enabling legislation. Members of the interstate commerce commission, it is felt, will be left in no doubt as to his endorsement of the consolidation principle on the statute books.

The utility industry figures that it has nothing to fear from President Hoover. And that, rather, he will favor all honorable, legitimate, efficiently-conceived plans to effect economies through large-scale operation and the interconnection of power lines.

Mergers are the order of the day and will be the order of tomorrow in many industries and in merchandising. Here again, President Hoover is expected to be entirely sympathetic because of his inborn aversion to avoidable economic duplication, waste, inefficiency.

His first-hand international knowledge and experience are expended upon to impel him to stand squarely behind all honest efforts to strengthen America's football in world markets. His outspoken opposition as secretary of commerce to schemes backed by foreign governments to sandbag American consumers of manufactured commodities abroad has convincingly demonstrated his vigilance, not to mention his courage, on behalf of American interests.

If the truth were known, doubtless it would be found that Mr. Hoover would prefer distinctly less "celebrating" by Wall Street. There is nothing spectacular or sensational about the reckless swelling of the stock market value of the capital of this, that and the next corporation by tens of millions, even hundreds of millions, with lightning rapidity. "Values" added so breathlessly rapidly can melt as breathlessly rapidly.

The best thing Wall Street could do for the success of the Hoover regime would be to stop reveling in fireworks and subside to undisturbing normalcy.

AUTO INDUSTRY BIG LEADER OF THEM ALL

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

When President Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., of General Motors, stated recently in Boston that one person in every ten in this country was dependent for income on the automobile industry, he spoke conservatively. The latest figures indicate that 18,000,000 are employed directly or indirectly by this industry, the world's biggest employer, aside from the Government itself.

ing to the figures furnished us by Benjamin H. Cram, well-known automotive authority. The gain for the year just past was about 7 per cent, and the present high rate of production and unfilled orders indicates that 1929 may prove another banner year.

With this gain in car registrations must come at least a certain amount of gain in employment, not only within the automotive industry itself but also in affiliated lines.

The so-called over-production of gasoline will certainly be softened, to say the least, by the ever-growing demand for it. At last accounts, 9 per cent of the gasoline output was consumed by the automotive world.

There is an idea, perhaps born of the fact that Federal Reserve membership fell off in 1926, that members can rebel against Federal Reserve Board rulings by the simple process of withdrawal. This is all wrong, so far as national banks are concerned. The Federal statutes compel national banks to be members of the Federal Reserve System.

Flow of traffic as evenly and uninterruptedly as possible is essential for the maximum of safety in industry. This statement, often repeated in this column, was emphasized by the "first gentleman of Massachusetts" last week. It is evident that, in honest efforts to regulate traffic properly, there exists considerable difference of opinion. Secretary of State William J. Stratton of Springfield, Ill., for example, tells me the Legislature is considering a proposal to have all applicants for operators' licenses tried for "hearing and eyesight ability to understand highway warning and direction signs, and knowledge of the provisions of the Motor Vehicle Law." An idea along the same line was rejected on Beacon Hill.

Very prominent New England gentleman, who has been a constructive student of the tariff question for many years, tells me: Eight years ago, Warren G. Harding became President and announced that it would be one of his main objects to assist the country to return to normalcy. The measures mainly relied upon to accomplish this purpose were increased opportunities for employment and a return to the protective policy which had, to some extent, been abandoned by the Underwood tariff of 1913.

"Eight years have passed since President Harding undertook this task. A report just issued by the Department of Commerce, summarizing data collected in the census of manufactures for the year 1927, shows that the number of wage earners in manufacturing industries increased from 6,944,000 in 1921 to 8,351,000 in 1927. Wages increased from $8,200,000,000 in 1921 to $10,848,000,000 in 1927. The value of manufactured products increased from $43,618,000,000 in 1921 to $62,713,000,000 in 1927. In percentages, the number of wage earners increased 20 per cent; the amount of wages paid increased 32 per cent, and the value of products increased about 40 per cent.

"Figures like these speak eloquently of the industrial progress of the United States from the beginning of Harding's term to the end of Coolidge's term. They also indicate the soundness of the remedies proposed and inaugurated by President Harding, and successfully carried out by President Coolidge."

Paul H. Bonner, vice-president of Stahl Bills Corporation, will be the guest of the Boston Chamber of Commerce at a special luncheon, Thursday at 12:30 p. m., in the main dining room. Mr. Bonner's speech on "The Value of Appearance," will inaugurate the Chamber's "Art Week in Boston," which will begin the following Sunday, March 10, and extend through the 16th.

The Chamber's program for Art Week, which will be announced soon, brings together in Boston outstanding exhibitions of the fine arts available to citizens of Boston through the museums and other art groups. It is the aim of "Art Week" to bring the fine arts into closer touch with the manufacturers and merchants, and to create a public consciousness in art particularly as it affects everyday commodities.

* * *

Mr. Bonner will stress the value of art in industry, upon which work has been largely responsible for the success of his company and in which he has become intensely interested, not only from the point of view of the textile manufacturer, but from the point of view of all industry.

U. S. WORSTED MEETING SET FOR MARCH 23

Annual meeting of U. S. Worsted Corporation was postponed to March 23 to permit of clarification of the present situation. The books will be kept open in the interim for the purpose. Directors will also be asked to attend the meeting to explain some of the details which appear to the minority to be "in the dark."

At annual meeting of U. S. Worsted Corporation, last prior to adjournment voted for clarification of the proxy situation, Edward S. Snow urged stockholders to fight any plan to make stockholders relinquish control of the company. Holders of the debenture bonds, he said, had planned to liquidate the company before end of 1928, and therefore were now asked to "sit in at the obsequies."

Last year, he said, the company lost $1,657,000 and he therefore have indicated that there is nothing left for the stockholders and that they should refuse to pay any more money. He did not think these bondholders had a right to take possession of the property, as New York banking interests, he said, are not disposed to force the company.

He urged that stockholders get together with the bondholders and that some plan could be arranged that would be satisfactory to both. The bonds were not issued for cash, he brought out, but were issued to satisfy merchandise debts and were contingent upon ability of the company to earn money. As income bonds, he held the owners thereof had no right to ownership of the company or to a vote until maturity of the bonds.

It was brought out that Governor Allen, a director of the company, through his firm, Winslow Bros. & Smith, owned $975,000 of the debentures, which with the $600,000 owned in New York, amounted to roughly 50% of the issue.

AMERICAN TIN DELIVERIES SET RECORD

An all-time record for tin deliveries in the United States was established when figures for February became available showing a total of 6750 for the month.

This brings total deliveries thus far in 1929 to 15,545 long tons, more than 1000 tons above the figure of 1928 which was heretofore the January-February record. The figure might have been still higher had it not been for the delay in discharging cargo from several vessels that arrived during the month. Tin brokers predicted that March figures would show a decided gain as a result of this delay, with the probability that figures for the first three months would establish another all-time record.

Increasing importance of tin to American industry explains the record-breaking production and the prediction made by various authorities that 1929 would show great increase over any other year in the consumption.

At prevailing prices, the tin delivered so far this year is worth approximately $17,000,000, and the value of the finished products in which it finally reaches the market runs into the billions of dollars.

NEW AMERICAN TRUST BRANCH ANNOUNCED

Early in April the American Trust Company will open a Newbury st. branch at 124 Newbury st., in the Raymond & Whitcomb Building. This branch will extend to customers of American Trust Company the same comprehensive banking service as may be found at the bank's main office—50 State st., and its branch at City sq., Charlestown.

Francis H. Hart, Jr., will be manager of the new branch and Joseph Belyea, assistant manager. Miss Gladys Draper will be in charge of the ladies' department.

The bank's new quarters, which were obtained through the office of C. W. Whittier & Brother, will be altered extensively and the bank's architects, Messrs. Hutchins & Wheeler, have chosen a Colonial atmosphere as an original idea in a bank's setting.

According to the plans the front of the office will be equipped to render every type of banking service, while in rear will be an attractive lobby, a ladies' lounge and writing and telephone rooms. The interior will be finished in country pine, with the Colonial idea especially carried out in the furniture and lighting fixtures.

The opening of this Newbury st. branch is further evidence of the growing importance of this district as an uptown shopping center free from the traffic congestion so evident in other sections of the city.

Brown Co. Has Big Stock of Copper

"The rising prices for copper and brass are causing us no concern at the present time," is stated by John B. Brown, president of the John W. Brown Manufacturing Company, maker of automobile lamps, the stock of which is listed on the Chicago and Detroit Stock Exchanges. "We are large users of brass in our plant, but our present requirements have been anticipated. We started buying late last fall and, in all, contracted for nearly four million pounds of sheet brass.

"All of these purchases were at prices below the current market level so that our profits have not been affected by the advance in the market. We have sufficient brass contracted for to care for our requirements for several months. This will carry us over the peak production months before it is necessary to make additional purchases."

Views of Wall Street

Westinghouse.

CONVERSATION with A. W. Robertson, recently-named chairman of Westinghouse Electric, elicits this important admission: Westinghouse will not be confronted for a year at least with the necessity of any large scale expenditures either for improvements or additions. Only routine charge-offs for such purposes will be required, thereby allowing a greater percentage of income for net. In the last several years Westinghouse has charged off millions of dollars for such purposes in order to bring about maximum efficiency. Incidentally, Westinghouse earnings for 1929 may run close to $2,000,000 monthly.

Kolster Profit.

Establishment of the new Kolster-Brandes Inc., subsidiary to handle Kolster's foreign business promises sizable profits to the parent organization. It was asserted that the parent company has received free over 400,000 shares of the subsidiary's stock. The Kolster-Brandes shares will be listed in London and already have been quoted above $10 a share. The parent company's profit thus run above $4,000,000 on stockholdings alone, while benefits anticipated from the wider distribution facilities should help Kolster's earnings substantially.

Goodyear Improvement

Goodyear Tire & Rubber started this year off with marked improvement in its earnings. It was stated that January business resulted in a net equal almost to $2 a share. Most of the big tire companies were able to acquire sizable supplies of crude rubber at the lowest levels, so that the improvement in the price of the crude has placed them in position to show material by larger earnings. While few expect Goodyear's income to continue at the reported January rate, forecasts are confidently made that its net for the current year may approximate $15 a share.

Chrysler and Motors

Chrysler's net for February approximated 70 cents a share, according to estimate. General Motors sales thus far this year are about 20 per cent above the same period a year ago, largely due to foreign business.

Copper Shares

Most conflicting reports are heard with respect to the character of buying and selling in the copper stocks. Some realizing undoubtedly came into the market when the price of copper failed to advance as expected and the recent dividend increases also caused some sales. But those who have consistently maintained bullishness on the group insisted that the future still holds promising things for the entire big copper companies. The public has become heavily involved in the copper shares, as a matter of fact the coppers are contributing a substantial portion to the total loans.

Representative Needed

Recognized changed status of importance of investment bankers to the general business situation brings to the fore the question whether a representative of the private banking interests should be named to the Federal Reserve Bank directorate. The investment bankers today occupy a position equal to that of member banks of the system in that general business is depending more and more on the money market for its funds.—J. G. B.

King Is Snowbound in Winter Palace

Sofia, Bulgaria, March 4—King Boris was marooned in his snow bound winter palace Stinialkovo at Samokov, 60 miles from Sofia. All state business was suspended, while gangs of peasants were at work clearing the road to enable the king to reach the capital. There has been heavy snowfalls throughout the country and many persons were reported frozen to death.

COTTON MARKET IN A STRONG POSITION

"Although there may be a disposition to ascribe the improvement in cotton, both in respect to tone and price, during the past week to unfavorable weather in certain portions of the South, we think the influences responsible for the movement to be much deeper than those emanating from current climate developments," says Munds & Winslow's weekly letter.

"In the first place we think cotton is in a remarkably strong technical position. We consider this highly important as we think the internal market situation largely governs the available supply of contracts, and while we are dealing with a great world commodity the aspect through which values are registered is the contract market itself.

"Along in the latter part of January, as a result of disappointment over the failure of an immediate textile revival to develop, there was a period of declining prices and widespread speculative liquidation. Many of the tired long holders welcomed the opportunity to reduce or get out of their contract engagements as the crop moved to the 20-cent level for the old crop months. In the period of pronounced stagnation, lasting for several weeks, during which time consumption moved within a daily range of five or six points, the liquidating process proceeded unchecked.

"As a result of this combination of circumstances we have a market in which the supply of floating contracts is reduced to a minimum, and the problem now confronting the trade is the source from which selling may come to furnish the contracts required to meet the demand for mill fixation. In this one particular the market presents a situation of extraordinary strength.

"No recent developments have appeared, in so far as we can see, to indicate a lessening of the strength of underlying fundamentals. Absorption of cotton products by the mills continues to be in excess of finished output and probably equal to mill production of grey goods. This condition, it seems to us will call for more liberal buying on the part of converters and finishers.

"Within the near future the government report of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners will be published covering operations for the six months from August 1 to January 31, inclusive. We believe the figures will be in keeping with consumption for the month of February, and the full season at 14,000,000 bales. We are inclined to expect the Federation figures for the six months' period to show about 6,000,000 bales or at the rate of 15,000,000 for the full year. This report, however, will cover the period of the heavy season, and we think the last six months are bound to show a decided gain over the first half, which confirms our own expectations of a consumption in excess of 15,250,000 bales.

"The first clue to this outlook will be found in the census report on February consumption by American mills. This should be fully up to the per diem rate of January this year and provide a total considerably in excess of February, 1928. In spite of this increased mill output, however, we think the next report of the Association of Textile Merchants of New York will show a lack of goods in excess of mill production.

"We, therefore, believe we are warranted in looking for consumption above 15,250,000 bales, thus making about a sharp reduction in world reserves of American cotton. The textile industry will require about the same season somewhere between 15,500,000 and 16,000,000 bales. We do not profess to know what the crop will be produced but we feel that we are justified in stating that the early outlook is not from supporting such expectations.

"In this particular it might be pointed out that while the states west of the Mississippi have had a good season in the ground without winter temperatures in Oklahoma and extreme north Texas the winter has been unusually mild east of the Mississippi river, with all indications pointing to a heavy initial infestation by the boll weevil. Heavy rains and local overflows have delayed preparations thus far. Moreover we call attention to the fact that in the big crop years of 1925 and 1926 preparations were far advanced, and early planted cotton was up in south Georgia and other southerly portions of the Eastern Belt by the 15th or 20th of March. We do not think we are likely to witness such an advanced condition this spring.

"We sum up our market conclusions by stating that we expect a substantial advance."

MAIN TREND IS UPWARD, SAYS DUN'S REPORT

As was expected, two months of the new year have added substantially to the constructive elements in the general business situation The net result has been plainly favorable, and the continued unevenness of conditions, with some disappointing aspects, is a wholly natural phase.

Simultaneous progress in all lines, and of the same degree, would be an economic phenomenon, and its absence now does not obscure the fact that the main trend is upward. That movement has attained particular vigor in steel and copper, where accentuated buoyancy prevails, and a strengthening of the markets for these commodities has been a logical concomitant of the expanding demands.

Competition for orders keeps prices in various channels on a comparatively low basis, yet advances almost balance declines in Dun's comprehensive list, and it has been the exception, as in hides and leather, where pressure to sell has been sufficiently pronounced to cause conspicuous weakness.

Even in these instances, an abatement of depression has developed recently. It is a feature of most textile divisions, moreover, that a large production is passing steadily into consumption, and in certain cases difficulty is being experienced in obtaining supplies as quickly as they are needed.

The disinclination of manufacturers nearly everywhere to accumulate stocks in anticipation of contractual contracts occasionally leads to temporary shortages when the volume of buying increases suddenly, but there is a wholesome lack of the widespread feverish bidding for goods that during some previous periods tended to disorganize the price structure.

Strict adherence to conservative policies in most commercial channels forms a bulwark against precipitate and severe reaction, and confidence in the outlook remains unimpaired, notwithstanding the encouraging statistical exhibits, which outnumber those of an opposite character, by decisively numerous have a more prominent place now, by reason of the decided improvement recorded in February.

Toward a month-end, call money rates usually tend upward, and the present instance has provided no exception to the normal trend The present level of the market, however, is distinctly higher than was the case a year ago.

Recent developments in the copper situation have been such as to merit special attention. After a quiet period that followed the earlier rise, the market turned extremely active again this week with an abrupt further advance in prices. Thus the quotation on the electrolytic grade crossed 19 cents the highest point touched since 1920. Feverish conditions have prevailed, but the producers have temporarily withdrawn offers.

In a steel situation that has various features of interest, the current strengthening of prices has a significant place. It has been several weeks that demands have been very full, but evidences of actual price advances were not quick to appear. That movement, however, is under way now.

It is possible this week to report further progress in some textile divisions, notably in the cotton and Woods manufactured from that staple, particularly printed materials, have moved in a volume said to be fully up to the current high production.

RESERVE MOVE FOUND MENACE TO BUSINESS

Harvard Economic Society declares in its weekly letter, made public today, that "measures taken by the reserve authorities to harden money and reduce speculative credit, if successful, may react on business during the spring These measures have so far had little effect upon the volume of speculative loans, and an advance of rediscount rates above 5 per cent may well prove necessary to bring about a further contraction.

Should the eserve banks carry through a firm-money policy vigorously and consistently, however, such contraction (with an accompanying downward movement of stock prices) would be inevitable. Thereafter, the release of speculative credit might enable the reserve banks to reverse their policy and ease the money market.

"It is clear, moreover, that the present tension in the money market is not due to a lack of banking resources; and we therefore believe that any adjustment in stock prices—though likely to be severe if business is also affected—will be transitory, like the other 'intermediate' movements of recent years."

JUMP IN COST OF OIL MADE IN BRITAIN

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE,
Universal Service Special Wireless.

London, March 4—The week's market sensation was the report of a truce in the oil war between the British owned Anglo-Persian and the Royal Dutch Shell interests, and Friday's announcement of a 5-cent boost in the price of gasoline for the British motorist.

The Daily Express charges the raise is a result of a secret conference last August between Walter Teagle, Standard Oil representative, and Sir John Cadman, with the object of each company supplying its own market from its nearest supply source, thereby reducing transportation costs.

But the Daily Express insists that the plan originally brought to perfection until the Russian oil is brought in, which now marks its triumph in a world combines which will cost British motorists $40,000,000 annually.

After the depression early in the week, due to further reports of increased American production, Friday's price fluctuations caused a sharp upward jump in all oils. Friday's whirlwind on Wall Street, coming at the week's closing, had no effect on the London market.

Subject to occasional slight relapses, gild-edged shares continued heavy with the absence of any answering upward movement at all. Forward change in the bank rate having a slight cheering effect, but not for long, as it does not permit 5½ per cent rate to carry stocks on borrowed money, the general tendency of all products also is to sell, which more than offsets the buying by ordinary investors.

Nothing but a substantial reduction in brokers' loan s in Wall Street with a corresponding curtailment of the wild bull market will cure the present London monetary disease.

Among the industrials the Anglo-American group were fairly well supported, with Victors and Radios leading. Electrical undertakings were very firm, and shipping and steel shares were dull. American Celanese had a sharp rise early in the week.

600 MORE LYNN STRIKERS GO TO WORK

Six hundred more striking Lynn shoe workers returned to work today, leaving 1600 still out, and it was expected that ten or twelve factories would be signed up by nightfall.

At a mass meeting of striking lasters, cutters and stock fitters it was stated that only 17 of 47 factories had signed the agreement, but it was expected the others would fall into line rapidly because of the necessity of getting out their Easter orders.

The return of the 600 strikers today permitted 4000 loyal workers to continue at their tasks who otherwise would have been forced to suspend operations at noon.

L. W. Minchin

Mr. Minchin has been with this company for the past 23 years and has successfully held all the positions that lie between office boy and vice-president. Mr. Minchin, who is exceedingly popular with the fruit trade, will remain at Boston and will also continue his duties as sales manager of this territory.

Nobile Censured for Italia Crash

Rome, March 4 (AP)—Official blame for the disaster which ended the North Pole flight of the dirigible Italia last May was attached today to Gen. Umberto Nobile, its commander.

Two counts are contained in the censure, which was made by the official board of inquiry into the disaster appointed by Premier Benito Mussolini. The first of these blames Nobile for the crash itself; the second finds no acceptable justification for his letting himself be rescued from the ice first.

Summer Home of Whitin Is Looted

Uxbridge, March 4—House furnishings, including imported articles and antiques, valued at between $3000 and $4000, were stolen in a break which was discovered today in the summer residence of James E. Whitin of Whitinsville, on the Hartford turnpike here. Rugs, draperies, books and clothing were among the things taken. The break was discovered by Albert M. Marshall, superintendent of Edgeworth Farm, adjoining the Whitin estate. Whitin is an official of the Whitin Machine Works.

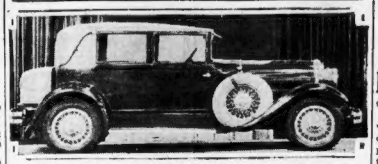
NEW HUDSON VICTORIA



BIG ATTRACTION AT BOSTON AUTO SHOW

The Greater Hudson Victoria has been redesigned this year to embody larger seating capacity and the modishness of the new Hudson-Essex lines. It has all the engine improvements giving greater power and speed, more complete carburetion and hence less gasoline consumption.

BIG DISPLAY OF HUDSON-ESSEX MODELS

A feature of added interest at the auto show this year is the printing press used by Benjamin Franklin in 1722, on display at the Hudson-Essex exhibit in Talbot Hall, Mechanics Building.

The machine, a hand-operated affair, is attracting thousands who view the relic with much interest. Of particular value to Boston visitors is the press since Franklin studied under his brother, James, in the Hub 207 years ago.

A complete line of both the Hudson and Essex cars is being shown this year for the first time, 21 body types occupying the entire Talbot Hall.

The Essex cars are shown in seven different body types. A variety of colors and color combinations are offered in five groups, and the facilities embodied in the comfort of the car is especially applicable to the needs of women drivers.

The Hudson cars are also appealing to the eye and to the ear, and without doubt to the pocketbook.

Fred Ordway, president of the Henley-Kimball Co., is not only explaining the features of his car but the historical printing press of Benjamin Franklin.

NASH CO. HEAD TO ATTEND HUB AUTO SHOW

Charles W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors Co., whose manufacturing and engineering success in the year just past, has been marked as a major feature of the international automobile industry, will arrive in Boston tomorrow morning, to attend the annual dealers' meeting and luncheon of the Nash New England Co. at the Copley-Plaza and to be a special guest of the Boston automobile show.

In his visit, the veteran manufacturer will be accompanied by C. H. Bliss, sales manager of the Nash Motors Co., and an acknowledged leader in the motor merchandising field. The factory officials will be guests of the Nash New England Co. during their visit.

The arrival of Nash, following as it does the most successful eight months' production and sales period ever experienced by the Nash organization, and one in which the Boston distributing organization has registered a great sales achievement, is considered one of the high lights of Automobile Show week. It follows a series of automobile show triumphs in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Toronto, Kansas City, and other points, and comes as a climax to an outstanding eastern merchandising success.

SELECT OLDSMOBILE DE LUXE

These three winners of a personality contest at Long Beach, Cal., and immediately after the awards were made they selected an Oldsmobile De Luxe four sedan as the personality car. At left, Mildred Bennett, the personality girl; center, Lucille Rutherford, second; right, Fay Clark, third.

With its sales of last year showing an increase of 52 per cent over the year preceding, the Boston Oldsmobile Company is now looking forward to a continued and proportionate enlargement of its business in 1929, Harry Dunn, general manager, declared today.

During the two months just past, he said, Oldsmobile sales have shown indication of doubling those of the first two months of 1928.

Manager Dunn's statement said further:

"One of the major mechanical advancements incorporated in the 1929 Oldsmobile are the fully-machined, rifle drilled connecting rods. The drilling permits lubricating oil to be sent under pressure directly to the piston pins, thus giving the car full pressure lubrication. This feature heretofore has been a characteristic only of much higher priced automobiles."

GREAT INTEREST IN QUEST OF TYPICAL AMERICAN GIRL

MANY thousands throughout New England and the rest of the country are today keenly interested in the great Quest of the Typical American Girl.

The Quest has attracted nation-wide attention. It is not a movie or popularity contest, but it is purely a selective search to find the girl in the United States who may be called typical.

This is the fourth day of the Quest, which ends on March 31. From the interest manifest, it is evident that the selection of the girl will be of national interest.

The girl who is selected will receive the $5000 award made by Smart Set magazine, and will be acclaimed the Typical American Girl, a wonderful honor in itself.

NOMINATE NOW

Send in to the Typical American Girl Editor of this newspaper, a photograph and full description of the girl you wish to nominate for the honor of being selected in this region as the Typical American Girl. Each proposal must be accompanied not only by the girl's photograph, but a biographical sketch giving her age, weight, height, coloring (whether she is blonde, brunette, etc.) and her social, business and athletic activities.

This is a selective search and not a motion picture, popularity, or beauty contest. It is an effort on the part of Smart Set Magazine and the 17 co-operating newspapers to find the girl who best represents the Typical American Girl.

NOTED JUDGES

The girl who is chosen by the Boston Evening American as the Typical American Girl of this section will be sent to New York city under proper chaperonage and with all expenses paid as the guest of Smart Set Magazine. There, with the 16 other regional winners, she will be the guest of the magazine for a week.

While the 17 regional winners are in New York the national committee selected by Smart Set Magazine will choose the Typical American Girl from among them and will award her $5000.

But that is not all. Guy Hoff, the famous artist, who does the covers for Smart Set Magazine, will paint the portrait of the winner for possible use on one of the summer covers of the magazine. After he has finished that job he will paint the portraits of five of the remaining 16 girls.

A committee of nationally known men and women will select the Typical American Girl from among the 17 regional winners. The members of this committee are:

Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Rosamond Pinchot Gaston, young society woman and stage star; John Golden, great theatrical producer; Vina Delmar, celebrated writer; Guy Hoff, noted portrait painter, and Margaret Sangster, author and poetess, and editor of Smart Set.

OTHERS PROPOSE

These six persons acting with an official representative of the 17 co-operating newspapers, will study the records of the regional winners and then by ballot choose the girl to be honored as the Typical American Girl.

A candidate cannot propose herself in this quest.

Not only may individual readers of the Boston Evening American make their nominations for this highest honor that may be bestowed on an American girl in this decade, but social and other organizations may nominate candidates for the honor. Also high school societies, college sororities, business girls' organizations, women's clubs—all are invited to participate in this most interesting quest of a generation.

POLICE SLAYER HUNTED IN HUB

Irvington - on - Huden, N. Y., March 4—The cold-blooded, ruthless young killer who shot down Motorcycle Patrolman George Dugan without motive was believed by the police to be headed for Boston, Mass., today.

Fleeing the scene of his callous crime, the killer ordered the chauffeur of his commandeered car to drive to that city. In a moment of relaxation, he revealed to the chauffeur that his name was "Joe Gardiner," and that "I've got a grudge against all cops. They made a lot of trouble for me and I'll shoot every one I get a chance to."

Several miles away, "Gardiner" stopped the machine, took the chauffeur's coat and disappeared.

Patrolman Dugan had stopped his machine to rest by the road near the Finley J. Shepherd estate.

The killer approached Dugan. Without warning, he shot the policeman through the brain.

6—The girl chosen as the New England winner will be sent, under proper chaperonage, to New York at Smart Set's call.

7—The minimum age is 17.

8—In the event that the decision of the National Committee of Judges results in a tie vote, the full award of $5000 will be given to each tying candidate.

9—The decision of the judges will be final. No relative or member of the household or anyone connected with this publication, or with participating newspapers, can enter the Quest.

10—The Quest Editor of each co-operating newspaper will organize a process for eliminating candidates whereby each week his local committee will investigate the most likely candidates. At the end of the Quest the local committee will make a final choice by ballot.

The Abercrombie Mystery

BY CAROLYN WELLS

A Six Day Novel

Six-Day Novel by a Famous Author

CHAPTER 1

EILEEN ABERCROMBIE, the most alive, alert and vital woman on earth, was dead at 42.

As old as She, as young as Peter Pan, there were far more intriguing mysteries about her than the question of her birth date.

That was Eileen Abercrombie, and everybody admired, adored and envied her.

Only recently she had inherited a goodly sum, and though her husband had money aplenty this new fortune was a godsend to Eileen's daughter, Maisie, 20, child of a former marriage.

She had taken the name of Abercrombie when her mother died.

Hugh Abercrombie, the husband of Eileen, was, surprisingly, 12 years younger than his wife, a reserved, gentle man, who would sacrifice personal preferences rather than interfere with the wishes of another.

To his wife he was kind, to his stepdaughter all that a real father could be and to his friends a prince.

It was Miss Maude Mercer, his wife's social secretary, who brought him the shocking news of his wife's death.

Hugh shut the door in her face, and rang for his valet He didn't much like his valet Louis, but then there were a lot of people he didn't like His wife had been one of them

After Louis had left he sent for Corinne, Eileen's maid.

"Tell me about it," he said curtly.

"You see," the girl began. "Madame has been out of sorts for a week or more."

"I did not know it," Hugh said.

"No, Monsier, Madame desired nobody should know She had the trouble of the stomach. She was ill—even sick, but she desired no doctor, no medicine. She dismissed me, about midnight, and when this morning I went to waken her, she was—ah, poor lady, she no longer lived.

"What killed her, Corinne?" he asked unexpectedly.

"That I do not know, monsieur. But it was something—not merely an indisposition There was something strange.'

"Such as what? Speak out."

"I cannot help the feeling that Madame is the victim of poison."

"Poison! Good Lord, what do you mean?"

"Only that. It may not be, I may make the mistake, but, I fear—I fear it is the truth."

"But who—who—" Abercrombie gazed at her His gray blue eyes were misty and his brow was furrowed with anxiety.

"Ah, that we do not know," Corinne nodded with understanding. "Yet the symptoms, the effects—I am not a nurse, but I fear—I fear—"

Now Hugh Abercrombie, for all his gentleness, was by no means a weakling. First, Maisie must be informed. Even before a doctor was called. He went to her room, told her what had been told him, and the two sat silently staring at each other.

An exquisite bit of humanity was Maisie. She might have posed for

THE CURIOUS QUIZZER

Every day he asks a question and pictures those questioned.

THE QUESTION

Are traffic conditions better or worse in Governor sq. since the new regulations became effective?

WILLIAM A. PORTE, 645 Beacon st., Boston, taxi agent—In my opinion conditions at Governor sq. under the new regulations are worse than ever before. In the first place the signs above the square are very confusing; secondly, the pedestrians take their lives in their hands when they try to walk across the square. With only one lane moving at a time too much time is wasted in getting the motorist on his way in and out of the city.

JOSEPH P. DEL MONTE, Hotel Buckminster, Boston, manager:—Traffic conditions in Governor sq. are still in a terrible shape. The city could make a thousand new regulations and still traffic conditions would not be bettered. To my mind the only thing that will help Governor sq. is a tunnel built under it. A bill providing for this has been before the Legislature for two years. Can I it should have been passed long ago.

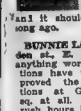
BUNNIE LAMPLOUGH, 245 Layden st., E. Boston, salesman—I anything worse. The new regulations have not improved the conditions at Governor sq. at all. During rush hours it takes almost half an hour to go through the square. Long lines of cars are held up indefinitely because of the wild confusion of the traffic system as it is now. There is a difficult problem to solve at Governor sq. and something must be done quickly.

• • •



T. J. McCUE, 44 Hoy ter., Milton, salesman—I think traffic conditions in Governor sq. are much worse under the new regulations. Places of business in the square will soon have to shut their doors if the situation as it is now is not remedied. Motorists have had so much trouble getting into Governor sq to do business that they have started to stop trying I don't think that there is any place in the city in as bad a condition as Governor sq.

EXPERT CLAIMS TAX IS UNFAIR TO PARENTS

"The federal income tax is very unfair to the salaried class and I am glad to support a movement to relieve this class of the present burden of taxation," said John H. Gilbody, certified public accountant of 60 State st. Mr. Gilbody has made out hundreds of income tax returns for puzzled persons.

The tax expert was commenting on the movement started among lawyers, doctors, journalists, stage and screen workers and other professional persons, and supported by the Hearst newspapers, to secure reductions in the tax rate on earned income.

"The United States government tried to adjust this by exemptions," continued Mr. Gilbody, "but under present living conditions the exemptions are not high enough to take care of the matter properly.

"I feel that the age limit on exemptions for children should be extended to 21 years of age from 18.

PRINCIPLE IS WRONG

"If a child is not working and is going to school or college I think the exemption should be raised to $1500 because of this effort on the part of the parents to make the child a better educated person and probably a better citizen for that reason. Instead of removing the present inadequate exemption of $400 on a child when it reaches the age of 18, I am of the opinion that he should be almost quadrupled.

"As an illustration of the point I make, I will cite the case of a man who came to me the other day to make out his income tax. The man kept a careful account of the expenditures he made during 1928 on his son who had been attending Exeter Academy and who entered Harvard in November. Although very economical he spent exactly $1882.50 on that boy for 10 during the year and yet the government allowed him no exemption. That is clearly wrong.

UNFAIR TO PARENTS

"It is my opinion that the exemption on a child should be increased to $750, at ten years of age, further increased to $1000 when he enters a prep school and eventually placed at $1500 and until 21 years of age when he enters college.

"Many parents scrimp to put their children through school and college, going without new clothes, etc, to make both ends meet and I feel the government should be generous with them in the matter of exemptions in connection with earned income.

"It is my opinion that earned income should not be taxed the same as investment income and one way of getting at it is through more generous exemptions."

WOMAN IS SUBWAY 'SLASHER'

A woman slasher, who cut apparently with a mysterious type of knife-ring, slit twice the fur coat of a fellow woman passenger on a subway train today, according to a man who reported to police that he was an eyewitness.

The slashing occurred as a subway train stopped at Union station The woman slasher was accompanied by a male confederate with a pock-marked face.

The man who visited police and whose name is withheld by them, said that while riding toward Boston on the train from City sq., Charlestown, he heard the pock-marked man say to his woman confederate:

"How did you make out yesterday?

"Not so good," she replied.

"Never mind; we'll do better today," the man commented.

At Union Station, the eye-witness said he saw the woman pass her right hand successively along both shoulders of a woman who was leaving the train. The woman slasher wore a silver ring on her hand and when her hand came away there were two slits in the coat, but the slasher apparently had nothing in her hand.

ALL DEAD AFTER TWO PARTIES

Peoria, Ill., March 4 (AP)—Poison liquor was blamed today for seven deaths here within 48 hours. In a roundup of bootleggers started as soon as a coroner's investigation was completed two men were arrested.

Three persons died Saturday and four yesterday, but the first knowledge that they had died from other than natural causes came late last night when Coroner W. H. Elliott announced that post mortem examinations had revealed that poisonous liquor was the cause of death.

Three of the dead men and two others who were seriously ill were members of a party held by livestockmen at a hotel Thursday night. The four others, who died, also were a woman, had no connection with the party, but police said they received some of the same consignment of liquor.

The first two arrests to result from the investigation were announced early today One, Walter Neibert, was a bartender in the soft drink parlor of the hotel where the party was held. The other, Maurice Mannsfield, was known to police as a wholesale liquor dealer. A raid on the hotel failed to uncover any liquor.

MODEL OFFICER HELD IN GANG SHOOTING

Chicago, March 4 (AP)—Policeman Edward Coleman, spoken of by his friends as "a good cop" who never smoked nor drank during seven years of unblemished police service, has confessed to taking an automobile chief "for a ride" Saturday night and shooting him, probably fatally.

His victim was Michael Bugario, 30, Coleman shot him in the mouth, the bullet lodging in the throat. Bugario also was severely beaten by two men, Bugario associates, who lined up with Coleman after the policeman told them he had been double-crossed by Bugario.

During 12 hours of questioning yesterday the officer maintained his innocence, despite the discovery of blood stains on his car. Last night his wife appealed to him to tell the truth, and he then gave a detailed confession.

Coleman said he became a "tipster" for Bugario a year ago, agreeing to tip off Bugario to automobiles that might be stolen easily. Coleman was to get $50 for the car Bugario stole.

"I wanted to quit it," Coleman's confession said, "but Bugario wouldn't let me. He said he needed $500 and threatened to 'talk if I didn't pay. I told two of his pals that Bugario was trying to shake me down. They agreed to help me settle him. We got him in my car Saturday night and drove into an alley. Bugario began to yell when they beat him. They told me to shoot him. I didn't have the heart until one of them said, 'Shoot him, or I will.' Then I fired."

Allston K. of C. to Have "Green" Night

With a wealth of talented artists scheduled to appear, the annual "Green Night" of Allston Council, Knights of Columbus, promises to be an outstanding social event. The night his wife appealed to him to tell the truth, and he then gave a detailed confession.

Coleman said he became a "tipster" for Bugario a year ago, agreeing to tip off Bugario to automobiles that might be stolen easily. Coleman was to get $50 for the car Bugario stole.

"I wanted to quit it," Coleman's confession said, "but Bugario wouldn't let me. He said he needed $500 and threatened to 'talk if I didn't pay. Bugario began to yell when they beat him. They told me to shoot him. I didn't have the heart until one of them said, 'Shoot him, or I will.' Then I fired."

Elks Hotel Dining Room Draws Crowds

When it comes to dining de luxe at moderate prices—in fact with no cover charge—it is hard to match the attractions of the Roof Garden Restaurant on the 15th floor of the popular Elks Hotel on Tremont st., next to the Shubert Theater. If at lunch or early dinner the patron may look far out over the city and surrounding towns, including Boston Harbor and see sights that were never dreamed of by the average inhabitants of Boston.

And best of all are those luxurious appointments of the restaurant in architecture and decorations There is a dinner dance from 6:30 to 8:30, and a supper dance from 9.15 to midnight, a la carte. To make everything all the more enjoyable there is the famous Joe Rines' Blue Bird Orchestra.

Cartersville, Ga., March 4 (AP)—Although weak from loss of blood and suffering from serious facial cuts suffered in an automobile accident yesterday, Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton, 93-year-old former United States Senator from Georgia, known as the State's "Grand Old Lady," early today was "resting easily."

TIME SHORT

Remember that the Flag Contest Editor will be glad to furnish, upon request, schools, organizations, patriotic societies and others who are conducting Flag Contests with the complete list of 75 official questions, which have been appearing in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

It is not too late to join the Flag Contest and participate in its amazing awards. It is well for you to assure yourself as a contestant. For this reason we are reprinting, in condensed form, how to form a local contest unit.

How to Form a Contest Unit or Flag Board

Any responsible adult individual, individuals or organizations wishing to conduct a Flag Contest may do so, by organizing a Flag Board consisting of five or more persons which shall work as an organization and be charged with the management of the Contest.

1—Obtain the contestants.

2—Appoint a committee to mark the papers of the contestants and determine the awards.

3—Arrange for recitation of the essays which accompany the answers to the 75 questions which are a part of the contest, and arrange for the presentations of the awards.

For the contestants themselves they have only to answer 75 questions relating to the history and glory of the American Flag and the institutions for which it stands, and to write the brief accompanying essay on the subject of "Old Glory's Greatest Glory." The answers and essays go to a local committee of judges selected by the patriotic sponsoring the local contest.

A complete list of the 75 questions will be furnished on request. All material needed for the conduct of a contest unit of Flag board will be furnished you without cost.

It is not too late to join!

Mr. F. W. Clifford, of 174 Franklin St., Portland, Maine, a railroad man who has to be out in all sorts of weather, got a bad cough while on a freight run. Then a druggist suggested REM. Now read his story . . .

His cough came "by freight"

—but REM sent it on its way "by express"

"Every time I get a cold, I get a cough," says Mr. Clifford. "I had one last winter and REM gave me quick relief. At that time I was working on a freight train, and you know that means I was exposed to the weather. This cough lasted quite a time and stuck to me in spite of all I did. Then I went up to Holland's at the corner of Oxford and Mayo, and asked for a good cough remedy. He sold me a bottle of REM, and I'm glad to say it relieved my cough in a short time."

REM didn't just "happen",—there's 43 years of pharmaceutical experience back of it. We've done the experimenting for you.

NOTHING LIKE REM
—and there's nothing in it to hurt you

'TALKIES' BARS THE DUMB

Baliff, leader of the famous Russian "Chauve Souris," back in Boston today after an absence of four years, hails the talking movies as the greatest blessing that has ever happened to the silent drama.

The day of the "beautiful, but dumb" actress is over as a consequence, Baliff declares. And Morris Gest, the producer for Baliff, over the enemy of beauty without brains agrees with Baliff wholeheartedly.

"In Europe," said Mr. Gest, "the beautiful woman has been out of date for years, but America still clung to the idea that beauty alone was supreme. And, then, even in the face of an over supply, when girls learned the art of taking care of themselves and so become physically more attractive to the eye, America still insisted on making beauty queen of the movies. But six months ago came the greatest revolution with the advent of the talking picture. It is pathetic. These beauties have no place on the screen."

Life Term for Nurse Who Slew Policeman

Denver, March 4 (AP)—Farlee King, Denver nurse, faced life imprisonment today for killing her former sweetheart, Patrolman John C. Hoblins, alias Robert K. Evans, in the General Hospital here Nov. 28, when she was assigned to his case after he had been wounded in a liquor raid.

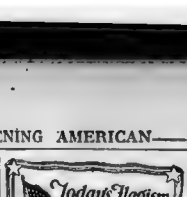
A jury convicted Miss King of first degree murder after 24 hours' deliberation. Sentence to life in prison is mandatory under the verdict.

Canadians Go Skiing in Bathing Suits

Ottawa, March 4 (AP)—Clothes matter little to Canadian ski experts as long as there is snow. Premier MacKenzie King visited enthusiasts at Gatineau. "Are you not cold in such a costume?" he asked a girl in a sleeveless red shirt. Then two boys in bathing suits came racing along on skis. The Premier inquired no more.

South End Boy Dying in Taxicab Accident

While crossing Tremont st., near Milford st., South End, Julius Zeff, 24, of 37 Oneida st that district, was struck by a taxicab operated by Merton E. Perry of Harrison ave., Roxbury. The youth was removed to the City Hospital, where it was learned that he had suffered a fractured skull. Doctors said they doubted if he would recover.



This is the date selected by the early American statesmen for the quadrennial inauguration of the new Presidents of the United States, the date having been selected, it is said, because it is one of the dates which most rarely falls on a Sunday. Washington today is displaying Old Glory in riotous profusion for the inauguration of President-elect Herbert Hoover. Winners of the Flag Contest sponsored by the Hearst Newspapers will be privileged to visit this wonder city in June and get first-hand information about the functioning of our government.

PROMINENT WOMEN JOIN IN REAL TEMPERANCE MOVE

Women who represent the views of thousands of other women, address today the readers of the Hearst newspapers in connection with the objective of the $25,000 temperance award contest, to find a legally adequate substitute for prohibition which will bring about actual temperance.

Several thousand communications from women, received by the Temperance Contest Committee at New York, have revealed a cross-section of American feminine opinion on the manifest evils which have sprung from attempts to enforce prohibition.

There is no unanimity of thought on the means to bring about temperance, since scores of different methods have been suggested, but these women, home-makers and wage-earners alike, are agreed that some way must be found to modify and liberalize the law so that there will be no market for bootleg poisons.

The vast majority of these women appear to stand for the legalization of light wines and beers under strict governmental regulation.

CALLED FALSE

Mrs. Katherine R. Clarke, president of the All Boston Women's Democratic Club, who states her opinion of prohibition, as she has observed it, declared without hesitation:

"Prohibition is only a farce with incidental music. Those who afford their liquor laugh at it; those who cannot sneer at it; those who profit by it, and those who profit by it, fight for it. Such is the state of affairs to which prohibition has reduced our country.

"Prohibition is the pet project of bootleggers and much of their money goes to sustain propaganda in favor of prohibition.

"Crime is on the increase. Can we say that murder was so common a thing before prohibition as today with the motive provocated by bad liquor?

"Gang wars are getting to be simple amusements, mere diversions from the tedious trials of a busy bootlegger's day. Nobody takes them so seriously as they warrant; not even the police.

"The present laws cannot be enforced and the only way out is to modify it. Why be afraid to admit the truth?

"Mr. Hearst is right; true temperance will never be obtained through enforcement of a law which cannot adequately or successfully be enforced. It is against the dictates of nature and man.

"Canada, to my mind, presents the best solution. They have paid for their roads, too, by liquor taxation, and you never see a drunken Canadian in the country.

AGAINST SALOON

"Those who would not like to see the law modified or repealed, are those who can afford to buy their liquor from the bootlegger or make it themselves. This type is only mildly interested in any phase of the question.

"The prosperous bootleggers are all heartily in favor of prohibition of course. Why not? They have coined money, hand over fist, because of it. Would one suppose them to be against prohibition, or suppose them to welcome a change of their money rendering laws?

"I never want to see the return of the saloon. No intelligent woman or man would entertain any such consideration. But I would like to see the modification of the Volstead act so as to allow light wines and beers. Then the Eighteenth Amendment will be enforceable. This terrible moonshine beverage will then disappear. Our hospital emergency wards be diminished.

"Prohibition has not regenerated a single man. Must we say more?"

Other views of women questioned for the temperance contest committee follow:

MISS MARGARET M. MORGAN, Past President of the California Business and Professional Women's Club—The present prohibition law is making lawbreakers out of otherwise lawabiding Americans. Many of our best class of citizens, persons who pride themselves on their civic consciousness for good, and who would not think of breaking any other law, violate the prohibition law almost daily and repeatedly, because they do not recognize it as legal or justifiable. They consider it an infringement on individual conscience, and on the exercise of good taste and personal liberty.

CONTEST'S APPEAL

The $25,000 temperance award contest for the best practical temperance substitute for the present law is probably the best method yet undertaken to find a way to terminate our present farce.

Its chief appeal is, or should be, not to the Wets, but to the Drys themselves. That appeal is to the people who want to see America really temperate. It is stirring up the minds of these people and is interesting them not only because of the $25,000 involved, but because of the justice and common sense of the cause.

Something better than the present "Enforcement" law is bound to be evolved as a result.

IRENE FRANKLIN, actress, New York—To my mind a correct solution for the prohibition problem means the future of our country, through the proper education of youth. I do not believe young men and women are being properly educated in regard to temperance. Many of their elders are taking the wrong tack.

YOUTH HARMED

In my travel from coast to coast, I have carefully noted the effects of what is pleasantly termed "prohibition" in cities where I have appeared. Before prohibition arrived one did not see young folks arrive at the theater with a flask and imbibe during a play.

This would have been shocking before the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted. Now it seems quite the natural and "smart" thing in most cities.

Mr. Hearst's $25,000 temperance award offer is unquestionably making people think. Too many have been willing to accept and submit to the ills under prohibition to which the temperance contest contributors are now directing their attention.

Every thoughtful professional woman, every housewife and every schoolgirl will hope that a constructive solution may be found for this great, thus far unsolved problem. Our youth must be saved, thereby saving the national integrity.

Here Are Rules in Hearst Temperance Contest

THE purpose of the contest is to obtain a practical plan, as a substitute for prohibition, which will secure better actual temperance conditions, which will be more easily possible of enforcement by State and Federal authorities, which will offer less encouragement to crime and tend less to debauch the public service and which will not so outrage and violate the fundamental principles of American liberty.

The rules and conditions of the contest are simple and are as follows:

1—Every person is entitled to enter the contest, but no one person may submit more than one plan.

2—The practicable plan proposed as a substitute for prohibition must be set forth in an article containing not more than one thousand words.

3—This contest will close on April 30, 1929, and no plan which has not been mailed and postmarked on or before that date will be considered

4—The articles submitted in the contest will be judged by a committee of eminent Americans, the personnel of the committee to be announced at a later date.

5—The full prize of $25,000 will be awarded to the contestant submitting the best plan as a practicable temperance substitute for prohibition.

6—If other plans not awarded the first prize shall still be considered worthy of some compensation by the committee, a second prize of $5,000 and other prizes of $1,000 each may be awarded.

7—Articles submitting a plan to be considered in this contest may be sent to the Temperance Contest Committee, care of the editor of any one of the following Hearst newspapers: Albany Times-Union, Atlanta Georgian, Baltimore News, Boston Evening American, Chicago Herald and Examiner, Detroit Times, Los Angeles Examiner, New York American, Omaha Bee-News, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Rochester Journal, San Antonio Light, San Francisco Examiner, Syracuse Journal, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Washington Herald, Wisconsin News (Milwaukee).

(If you have no objection to publication of your plan, please write "May print" in upper left hand corner of first page.)

Flashes $265 Roll and Soon Loses It

Springfield, March 4—Flashing a roll of $265 in an all-night lunchcart to pay for a hot dog and a cup of coffee today cost Jones Burkett of Chicopee Falls the roll, a bad scare and a lonely hike on foot through the Springfield suburbs.

Burkett, after driving away from the lunchcart, was forced into a ditch on the road to Chicopee Falls. Two men with drawn revolvers took his money, he said, then locked the ignition of his car and went away. He said the two men were in the lunchcart.

FORGERIES BARE FATE OF CZAR'S LOST DAUGHTER

Berlin, March 4 — Documents dealing with Anastasia, "daughter" of the last Czar of Russia, and who is now a guest of Princess Xenia, (Mrs. W. B. Leeds), in New York, have been discovered among the forged Bolshevist documents seized by the Berlin police.

These documents, it is expected, will go a long way toward clearing up the mystery surrounding the identity of the young woman who claims to be the Czar's youngest daughter, believed slain in Russia with the rest of the imperial family.

The police have not finished translating all of the Anastasia papers and refuse to state what has been revealed so far.

The examining magistrate in charge of the case admitted that some of the papers dealing with Anastasia are in the handwriting of Vladimir Orloff, one of the two Russians arrested in the gigantic forgery conspiracy.

Orloff, former czarist state counsellor and former member of the Ochrana, the czarist secret police, is believed to be the master mind in the most elaborate forgery plot ever conceived in history, in that it specialized in the fabrication of documents capable of creating trouble chief in international affairs, and some of which were specifically aimed at disturbing the internal affairs of the United States.

Orloff has refused to talk or make any statement since his arrest, though he was accused by Simanovitch, the other Russian arrested, of having forged three documents attempting to implicate Senator Borah.

Alcohol Content of Wine Set by League

Geneva, March 4 (AP)—A League of Nations committee today decided on a definition classifying wines and spirituous liquor. The definition said that a beverage which contains up to 20 degrees weight of alcohol may be classed as a wine, but that above 20 it becomes a spirituous liquor.

The question arose in connection with a drive to combat the liquor evil in world territories under the mandate, who have been requested to observe the league's standard.

CRACK OF BAT AND THUD FROM GLOVE MAKE BASEBALL MUSIC AT BRAVES CAMP

TAYLOR CRONIN LEGGETT SMITH COLLINS SPOHRER

The six above form the Braves catching candidates. There are some really good backstops in this group. The board of strategy will find out about their value soon.

HANK GOWDY

Hank is down with the boys each day practicing. He still can sock the ball and throw well. He will probably catch some of the games for the Braves this year. Hank is not through yet. Not by a long shot.

Jones is a fine prospect for the Braves coaching staff to work on. When at his best he had everything a good lefthander needs. If Percy hits his old stride, he will be among the best pitchers in the country this season.

PERCY JONES, PITCHER

Percy is working into fine form in the St. Pete training camp. He is determined to get back to his high rating of a few seasons ago. Percy may be a wonderful asset to the Tribe this season.

Training Camp Flashes

Tampa, Fla., March 4 (AP)—Fred Marberry, big right-handed pitcher, reported at the Tampa training camp of the Washington Nationals yesterday and after a conference with President Griffith its was announced that he would sign his contract today. Several other players drifted in were Catcher Ed Kenna, Infielder Joe Cronin, Harry Boss, first baseman, and "Stuffy" Stewart, second base candidate.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 4 (AP)—The biggest squad ever taken south by the Detroit baseball club yesterday enjoyed what probably will be its last day of rest before heading north to start the season.

Manager Stanley Harris plans to split the big squad into two divisions for practice. The first is to take the field at 11 a. m. and will work for an hour and a half, after which the second section will appear.

Avalon, Catalina Island, March 4 (AP)—Berlyn Horne, pitched three innings of satisfactory baseball to the delight of Manager McCarthy of the Cubs, yesterday. He allowed two hits.

The Cubs squad divided and went the regulation distance. Hendrycions, with Blake, Horne and Grabler as pitchers, setting down the Catalinas, 8 to 0. Nehf, Cvengros and Henson were the pitchers for the losers.

Dallas, Texas, March 4 (AP)—Catcher Martin Autry, purchased from the Cleveland Indians, has arrived at the Chicago White Sox camp, simultaneously with Blackerby, hard hitting outfielder.

Manager Blackburne already is talking victory, and is anxious to get started off on the right foot.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 4 (AP)—Wallie Schang, grizzled veteran of 16 years' service, arrived today to prepare for another campaign as a St. Louis Brown. Schang, who has been a week ago signed his 1929 contract, was a bit fat but appeared to be in good condition otherwise. His ankle, which was broken last summer, has mended except for a swelling which, he said, may be permanent.

Manager Howley gave his infielders and outfielders a rest yesterday but the pitchers and catchers were ordered out earlier than usual.

Avon Park, Fla., March 4 (AP)—A couple of showers drove Manager Southworth's St. Louis Cardinals off the field yesterday after the squad had been drilling less than an hour, in the first Sunday baseball maneuvers this town has ever seen. When the Cards' training season gets under way there will be 52 players in camp.

San Antonio, Texas, March 4 (AP)—Clifford Rankin (Pat) Crawford, handy man from Society Hill, N. C., is attracting a deal of attention at the training camp of New York Giants. Pat made quite a hit as first baseman with the Toledo club of the American Association last year and John McGraw, among others, seems to think the 27-year-old graduate of Davidson College is ready for the big-time.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 4 (AP)—Babe Ruth has decided that he is going to have a good year and that the New York Yankees are going to win another American League pennant.

He became eloquent as to the Yankees' chances.

"The other teams, Detroit and Washington in particular, may have improved," the Babe said, "but not enough to threaten us. I can't see that the Athletics, who gave us the most trouble last year, are any stronger. Neither are the Browns.

We are bound to get more pitching than we had last year for we will have Pennock and Moore back. And I am saying this before I've seen any of our young pitchers, and I hear they are very good."

AL MELLO AND DUNDEE CLASH AT GARDEN

Al Mello, Spindle City welterweight, still yearning for the day when he'll wear the toga of the welterweight championship, will make an effort to inflict his second straight defeat against Joe Dundee, welterweight champion of the world, a feat never accomplished by any other welterweight in the game today.

This brilliant ring conflict, which will be staged at the Boston Garden on Friday night, the proceeds of which will be donated to two worthy charitable organizations in the Hub—the Boys' Club of Boston and the Boston Children's Friend Society—is expected to prove even more exciting than the last meeting between these rivals.

Among those interested in the affair are Included: Mrs. Frank R. Thomas, Mrs. Charles I. Thayer, Mrs. Charles A. Talbot, Mrs. Edgar C. Rust, Mrs. Galen L. Stone, Mrs. William H. Robey, Mrs. A. Alexander Robey, Mrs. Augustus S. Nye, Mrs. Henry A. Morss, Mrs. John C. Lane, Miss Louvan W. Hyde, Mrs. George H. Pfeiffer, Mrs. Harold G. Cutler, Mrs. John T. J. Clunis, Mrs. Huntington R. CRIMSON-BLUE COURT TILT TONIGHT

By TED LYNCH.

Harvard and Yale continue their annual winter sport battles at the Hemenway gym, where the rival basketball fives of the two meet this evening.

The Crimson came through as winners in the polo and hockey contests and the Yale court five hope to atone for those setbacks by a win.

Yale will undoubtedly do this very thing for Harvard is a decided underdog tonight.

Harvard and Yale have quite similar records this year, each team just about breaking even in its season's record. But they play faster and better basketball at Yale, against tough opponents; while Harvard face mediocre teams and then only broke even in these games.

It is odd that they don't make better basketball players at Harvard. Athletic Director Bill Bingham has given the undergraduate one of the best coaches in the hoop game in Ed Wachter.

The dapper coach was one of the best hoop players in his day and it certainly takes plenty of patience to view calmly the sorry lot of candidates who turn out for the sport each year. Still Wachter goes on; a great coach without any material.

There is plenty of good varsity basketball material in the ranks of the present undergraduates but existing conditions offer little incentive to these players. The court conditions at the Hemenway Gym are deplorable for a college as big as Harvard. Then again, the sport comes in the midst of midyears and at the same time as hockey.

It is under these conditions that Coach Wachter has handed his varsity five which faces Yale tonight.

The strength of the Harvard team lies in its backs Justin Rex and Tommy Farrel, sophomores who are due to start before they receive their sheepskins two years hence.

Robertson Fights Jasse in Lynn Ring

Homer Robertson, crack local middleweight, and Bob Jasse, the pride of Revere, will clash at the Crescent A. C. Lynn, tonight, over the 10-round distance.

Jasse recently demonstrated his ability by whipping Joe Tavoleri at the Arena while Robertson displayed brilliant form in his winning contest with Ray Still of Kansas City at the Garden last Friday night.

Although Homer rules a slight favorite, Jasse is confident he will add the colored boy to his list of victims tonight.

Koloff Wrestles

Don Koloff and George McLeod will settle their argument at Worcester next Wednesday night.

They will wrestle to a finish for Jack McGrath in Mechanics Hall.

Carrigan Forced to Hold Men in Check

By JOE CASHMAN

Bradenton, Fla., March 4—The Red Sox special pulled into Bradenton early this morning and less than an hour afterward, Manager Bill Carrigan was sending a squad of 35 enthusiastic athletes through the first practice of the 1929 season.

The whole town turned out to greet the boys and wanted to start honoring them at once.

Carrigan, though, ordered all celebrations postponed until after the initial workout. So the players had nothing else to do but drop their bags at the hotel, breakfast quickly and jump into uniform.

The opening practice session was short and consisted mainly of limbering-up exercises and tossing the ball back and forth.

The weather was ideal, fair and warm, just as it was during the entire stay of the team here last season and the hired men, full of pep after five months of athletic idleness, were all for cutting loose.

FORCED TO QUIT

They pleaded to be allowed to continue when Carrigan called a halt to the session, but Bill refused to listen and they had to quit, much against their wishes.

Just as soon as they get over the soreness which follows the first few workouts, however, they won't need to beg for work.

The Sox have only six weeks to train, a shorter time than any other big league club and much must be accomplished in that time. Consequently, Carrigan and his right-eye Heinie Wagner, have mapped out a most strenuous training schedule.

There will be 42 players in the squad when it is complete which shouldn't be later than tonight. That number is far too many to handle at one time, so the athletes will be split up into two divisions just as soon as they loosen their muscles. Both squads will work two hours or more every day, and every man on the club will work hard or he won't remain.

For the first time since Carrigan returned to lead the Sox back, in 1927, he has plenty of material to work with.

During the past two seasons he had so few players of big league calibre that he couldn't afford to fire any of his regulars no matter what they did or didn't do.

SQUAD HAS ABILITY

The situation is entirely different this spring. There are 14 pitchers, six catchers, 11 infielders and 11 outfielders, and most of these have proven their ability to play big league ball or have minor league records which indicate that they can make the grade in fast company.

None of last year's regulars is sure of his job and any player who doesn't hustle every minute of the way hasn't a chance of winning a berth.

Carrigan and Wagner, as is their wont, are silent about the prospects of the team but both admit that they have far more and better material at their disposal then last year and that they will be greatly disappointed if the team doesn't prove a lot stronger than the 1928 machine.

Wagner, especially, is happy. It is his job to develop an infield and infielders are falling over each other down here just now.

Phil Todt is the only first baseman but Jerry Standaert, secured in the draft, can play the bag even though he has spent most of his career at third and will be given a tryout at the initial sack, if he doesn't fit at the hot corner.

REGAN MUST STEP

Phil Regan, regular second baseman for the past two seasons, is back on the job looking fine but he will have to hustle to beat out Grant Gillis and Hay Rhyne.

Gillis and Rhyne, will also be tried out at shortstop as will Bob Barrett, Benny Borgman, Bill Narleky, Freddy Moncewicz and the veteran Walter Gerber, regular shortstop last year.

Bob Reeves, secured from Washington in the Myer deal, is slated to be the regular third sacker but all the shortstop candidates, except Gerber, and Standaert, can play the position so there should be a battle royal to fill Buddy's shoes.

If Wagner is ever going to get an infield, he should be able to with the list of players to pick from.

Tufts Mound Squad Working Out Daily

Tufts baseball candidates have been working out daily at the Tufts cage in Goddard gymnasium under Coach Ken Nash.

The pitching situation is none too bright. Nash must get the hurlers in shape for a six-day spring trip during the first week in April. Two of the best prospects are on probation and another on whom Nash depended has left college.

At present there are seven men working out for mound jobs. Three of them, Adams, Story and Gibbins, did some pitching on last year's freshman team.

Stanley is the only candidate who has ever had a varsity assignment on the slab. Johnson was out for the team last year, but did not get any actual work.

Cups to be Awarded Exeter Gridmen

Exeter, N. H., March 4—To stimulate interest in football at Phillips Exeter, an anonymous person, not an alumnus of the school, has made it possible to award three cups to the outstanding football players each year.

One will be awarded to the best lineman between the tackles, another to the best backfield player or end and a third to the most valuable player.

In the preliminary spring work beginning this year, cups will be given to the most proficient punter, the most accurate dropkicker and to the most accurate passing center.

BRUINS-RANGERS IN BATTLE TOMORROW

By BILL GRIMES

As the Bruins and the Tigers are right up at the top of the races for the championship of their respective leagues, hockey interest is at fever heat in this vicinity.

The Bruins have two home games at the Garden this week. They battle the New York Rangers for ownership of first place in the American division of the National Hockey League tomorrow night, and wind up the week with the Ottawa Senators.

Bill Grimes

Like the Bruins, the Tigers will play two games this week, but they are scheduled to battle the Rhode Island Reds in both engagements. While the Bruins and Rangers are fighting it out at the Garden tomorrow evening the Tigers will be down in the Providence Auditorium trying to put over their first victory of the season against Providence.

At present the Tigers and Reds are deadlocked in first place of the Canadian-American League, and judging from the results of the past performances the Reds have the call to finish at the top of the heap for they play three of their remaining seven games with the Tigers.

In the five games already played the Reds have come through with four victories and one tie. Unfortunately for the Tigers, the Reds have been at the top of their form in every game but the scoreless tie, during which they were so badly handicapped by sickness and injuries that they did not measure up to their usual high standard. They did, though, have sufficient punch to blank the Tigers.

Although the odds are on Providence to clean up this week at the expense of the Tigers, by the law of averages the Bengals should come through with at least one victory.

If the Tigers can produce the article of hockey they played against New Haven, they will give the Reds or any other team a setback, for they played almost faultless hockey against the Eagles.

The Tigers and Providence will meet at the Arena on Monday and as the fans are just now beginning to realize that "action" is the middle name of the Classified Ads.

Sonnenberg and Malcewicz Sign for Title Mat Go

RIVALS TO CLASH ON MARCH 15

Dynamite to Be Opposed by World's Cleverest Wrestler at Garden

By JACK CONWAY

GUS SONNENBERG today once more proved he is what Dartmouth students and grads like to call "a dead game guy."

His offer of proof was his signing to battle Panther Joe Malcewicz in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Boston Garden on March 15 for title as world's heavyweight wrestling champion will be at stake.

For years it has been a sore item with mat champions, as well as the kings of the ring, to dodge serious competition. Tankers and setups have been greeted with open arms, but the real contender has been avoided.

Not so with Sonnenberg. They don't train the boys that way up at Hanover where the mat king received his schooling. Dynamite was taught to look the enemy in the eye, as it were, and then knock his eyes out.

Strangler Lewis will attest to this. Gus tossed him at the Arena and later wrested his title from him at the Garden.

There have been folks who have claimed that Malcewicz is a better wrestler than Lewis. The Panther recently licked Joe Stecher, then put the Nebraska flash to McLeod.

The Utica marvel hurled a challenge at Sonnenberg. Nobody expected that Gus, who has been doing pretty well by himself throughout the country, would accept the challenge. But he crossed up the wise boys.

Paul Bowser called for one of those showdowns for which he is so popular. It occurred today and the title bout was signed, sealed and delivered.

SONNENBERG and Malcewicz will immediately start training for the title skirmish. Each is already in good condition as they have kept active on the mat.

The contest will find the champion pitted against the fastest and cleverest wrestler in the world. Gus will be taught a few new tricks about the mat game. He will require his flying tackle and every other hold he knows to avoid defeat.

The Garden is sure to be jammed when Sonnenberg and Malcewicz whirl into action.

Paul Bowser might well term it another one of those battles of the century.

Huskies Need Good Right Hand Pitcher

Among the pitchers now working out daily at Northeastern, Coach Rufus Bond hopes to find one capable right-hander to take the place of Leo Crowley, last year's sophomore.

Crowley, hoping for a major league tryout, did not return to Northeastern this year, leaving Bond without a right hander.

The Huskies have never been so amply blessed with southpaws, however, with three veterans, Ray Richardson, Hal Somerville and George Whitman.

Richardson is a seasoned player, and very versatile. He has pitched, in addition to playing first base and outfield, three seasons.

Hyatt Best Shot in College Ranks

New York, March 4 (AP)—With two games still on his schedule, Charley Hyatt, Pittsburgh forward, appears to have clinched individual scoring honors among college basketball players in the East.

Hyatt has scored 275 points in 19 games, while Joey Schaaf of Pennsylvania, his closest rival, has 266 in 25 games and nly one more game to play. Ed Wineapple of Providence is third with 260; Jimmy Collins of St. John's, Brooklyn, fourth with 20; Glenn, West Virginia, fifth with 235, and Kreiger, Providence, sixth with 203. Hyatt leads in field goals with 106 and Schaaf in fouls with 74.

READY TO START FIRST SPIN OF SEASON

YALE EIGHT ON NEW HAVEN HARBOR

Ed Leader, Yale coach, recently had his oarsmen on the water for their first spin of the year. With five veterans in the boat, it showed excellent possibilities. The men above are, left to right, R. L. Anthiny, Capt. Cushman, S. P. McCalmont, W. W. Garnsey, L. W. Ladd, A. Palmer, C. W. Sutherland, W. R. Tappen, Coxwain Loomis. This is an Associated Press photo.

EAGLE SEXTET LOSES ONE MAN THIS YEAR

Boston College hockey team, which completed its schedule with a second victory over Holy Cross, has promising prospects for next year, as but a single regular, Capt. Art Morrissey, will receive his degree in June.

Morrissey played through every game on the schedule this year

Coach Sonny Foley is fortunate to have Ed Sliney and Cal Scully, who saw service this year as running mates with Morrissey on defense, coming back next season.

The entire forward line of Pete Sanford, Johnny Groden and Perley Payson will be available another year, as will the forward reserves, Joe Shea, Ed Kelleher and Ed Goggin.

Larry Gibson and Johnny Temple, who were out of the game practically the whole season through illness, will be in school next year, and will probably be able to report.

Leon Fitzgerald, Johnny Marr and Jack Grandfield, goalies, will also be candidates again next year. Marr is only a sophomore.

The election of captain most likely will be held this week. Sliney, Groden, Fitzgerald, Kelleher, Grandfield and Gibson are the eligible men.

Layton and Hall in 600-Point Match

New York, March 4 (AP)—Johnny Layton, world's three-cushion billiard champion, and Allan Hall of St. Louis begin their special 12-block 600-point match here tonight. The match, played in afternoon and evening blocks of 50 points each, will close Saturday night.

Billiard Tourney at Astor Club

Much interest is being displayed in the pocket billiards championship tourney at the State Billiards club at 13 Astor st. The afternoon games begin at 3 o'clock, while the night contests go on at 8 o'clock.

This afternoon Edward Jackson of New Bedford meets Edward G. Dwight of Malden in a four-pocket match. In the evening Edward Lyons of Charlestown opposes Brooks Carpenter, Somerville high school ace star.

The tourney, which started last week, will continue until a champion has been found.

New York, March 4—"Cannonball" Willie Garafola meets Johnny Ciarelli in the star bout at the 14th Regiment Armory Brooklyn, next Saturday.

FINE BASEBALL SQUAD AT B. C. FOR DUFFY

By JOHN GILLOOLY

Now that the Boston College hockey team has hung up the skates and the trackmen are idle until the outdoor season, baseball jumps to the leading position in sporting activities at the Heights.

Coach Hugh Duffy swings into the first week of March with a full squad and one of the healthiest that has greeted any B. C. coach in many years.

The outfielders will join the batterymen and infielders at the B. C. spring training camp loosted in the Commonwealth Armory today.

FIRST TEAM UNPICKED

Only a few berths have been settled on the B. C. squad and there is a lot of interest centered in the potential first string nine at the Heights for the coming campaign.

Al Westo is anchored on first base. He's the captain of the B. C. outfit this spring and that's one reason why the Eagles are hoping for championship honors. Al has every quality of a leader.

Hank O'Day seems settled at the hot corner while Paddy Creedon is first in line for the second base job. But these three positions are the only ones that seem preoccupied.

The rest of them probably won't be taken over definitely by any individual much before the Eagles are ready for their first encounter, on March 30 at Fort Munroe, Virginia.

GIBSON BACK

Larry Gibson is the lone fielder returning. Herb Stokinger and Andy Morris, veterans a year ago, have departed by the diploma route. Gibson probably won't be ready to play ball much before the warm weather according to Dr Goodwin who ordered him off the hockey squad because of a run-down physical condition.

But Gibson will make the number of taken positions four if he feels like playing ball in a week or so. He was one of the best hitters and fly swingers on the team last spring.

Ted Duffey, who started the season of 1928 in right field only to drop to the role of a substitute after a slump in hitting, is a likely looking candidate for the right field manouvering. Duffy is a good hitter and no slouch in the right field spaces.

Al Ricci and Joe Shea are outfielders from the freshman squad who are seeking berths. They're both fair fielders and sluggers but need a lot of polishing.

HERMAN VERSATILE

In Peter Herman, Duffy has a boy who can take his turn in the outfield when not on the mound. Herman filled this bill two years ago and had a starting batting average, high up in the four hundreds.

Charley Murphy and Bob Smith have also had experience along these lines and have proved their ability with the bludgeon. Smith is a catcher and Murphy a pitcher. Smith is slated for the first string catching job but with Colbart and Gibson to bat behind the plate he might be used now and then in the pastures.

So despite the lack of veteran outfielders Duffy is not a bit upset for he has left-overs on his squad who are natural ball players and can be easily converted to any position in the outer gardens.

Duffy intends to have his boys go through the motions in sort of a dummy game before the week is out. There is no hitting of the ball in the armory for there is too much glare on the ice. The fielders get a chance to judge the hops and the batters can get their eyes sharpened a bit for curves, hooks, etc.

Eleven Tech Track Marks Shattered

Eleven Technology track records have been broken during the past two weeks and Dick Baltzer of Quincy won the 1000-yard national junior championship, making 32 record-breaking performances of Tech prowess.

Baltzer started the long list of events when he came through at the Scotch games a week ago Friday to win the championship in 2.22.2-5.

Baltzer, incidentally, was defeated in the interclass track meet by his rival, Morris Herberts of Medford at 1000 yards in 2.24. Saturday afternoon.

Up to the time that Baltzer won the junior title, Herberts had defeated him consistently and Herberts was expected to win the title before Baltzer.

Injury May Force Pie Traynor to Bench

Paso Robles, Cal., March 4 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates today were paying the penalty of too strenuous limbering up. Liniment and crutches were in demand.

Capt. Pie Traynor is most seriously injured of the team. An old hip injury, sustained in Philadelphia last year, has revisited the Pirate field leader and fears are held that Pie may be forced to the bench for the start of the season.

Regimental Meet at Armory This Week

By DICK McSWEENEY

Next Saturday the regimental meet will be held at the East Armory. It will be the last big indoor track meet in which the Hub schoolboy athletes will participate, and for this reason many fine performances are expected.

English high school track team is favored to win this meet on its record of past performances this season.

Latin school has the only track aggregation which will be able to give the Blue and Blue athletes any sort of competition, but even Latin will have difficulty with the English team.

VILLARI FAST

English has a likely winner in the junior 50-yard hurdles with Villari entered. Eastmond is picked to come through in the senior 50-yard hurdles, while Earl Cohen of English and Berge David of Latin will hold a great struggle in the 176-yard run.

Norton and Gladstein are both good enough to win the 300-yard run, while Sam Shear is a decided favorite in the junior 50-yard dash. Anything but an English victory in the senior dash will be a surprise, for McLean, Mazzochia and Levitov are speedy.

In the senior 1000, Dalley of English will have to beat Adam Medris of Latin, but Blue and Blue rooters are not worrying about the outcome.

George Gormley is favored to win the senior 600. Gorstein is another fine sprinter who will wear the English colors in this event.

TOSNEY IN HURDLES

Mechanic Arts has some strong performers in John Tosney, intermediate hurdler; Corato, 176-yard star; Thomas in the 220, and McManus in the 300. Lofgren is a fast yarder, who can give his opponents something to think about. Swalbe looks good in the intermediate 600, while McLennan is considered a strong entrant in the senior 600.

Arlington's victory over the Cambridge Latin basketeers was a big surprise to school court followers. The Cantab five has made a fine record on the court this season, and is expected to defeat its old rival, Rindge, when the two teams meet later in the week.

The victory of Brockton in Class A in the State meet was wholly unexpected, as was Malden's win in Class B. Brockton's athletes turned in some great performances and deserve a lot of credit.

Malden had not made much of a stir in the track world this season, previous to the State meet, but its win Saturday is going to make the Green and Gold respected on the track hereafter.

Bernard R. Baldwin, defense man, was re-elected captain of the Browns and Nichols hockey team for the 1929 season. Baldwin scored the majority of goals for his team this season and deserved the honor which his team-mates have bestowed upon him.

Arlington high's basket quintet will journey to Natick tomorrow for a court encounter. This is the next to last game on the Arlington schedule and Arlington fans are hopeful of a victory.

Entries Ready for Skating Battles

With the receipt of the Canadian entries for the North American figure skating championships, to be held tonight and tomorrow at the Arena under the auspices of the Skating Club of Boston, the selection of the teams to represent the United States and Canada was announced by the committee in charge of the competitions.

BRUINS FIGHT RANGER SIX AT GARDEN

dle name of the Powers team is, capacity house is expected.

The Bruins returned from Montreal last night, after a two-game trip, during which they broke even, shutting out [illegible] and in turn being whitewashed by Les Canadiens.

The defeat at the hands of the Flying Frenchmen was a surprise to the Bruins, for against Ottawa they appeared unbeatable. The players did not comment on their defeat as hopelessly as they did on the attack Howie Morenz made on George Owen.

According to the reports, it was a heavy check by Owen during the Harvard man's initial Canadian appearance as a pro that forced Morenz out of the game for weeks and threatened to disrupt the Canadiens. After Eddie Shore had tripped Morenz, the Swiss was so agitated that a few moments later he turned on Owen and brought his stick down with a resounding smack on the dome of the ex-Crimson star.

Howie Morenz is not the type of player who would go out and deliberately cut down an opponent and his assault on Owen was a great surprise to the Bruins, as well as the followers of the Flying Frenchmen.

The amateur program for the week calls for a two-game series between the University Club and Kenzella, at the Gaiety, at the Ba, State Amateur League on Wednesday night, at the Arena and the semi-finals of the Boston Athletic Association Boston University contest Saturday night.

Tech Swim, Court Teams in Action

The basketball game with Tufts and dual swimming meet with Brown on Wednesday evening are the feature Technology athletic fixtures of the week. The basketball game will complete the Tech schedule.

Engineer fencers meet Boston University tomorrow at the latter's gym. The yearling basketball closes with the Tufts freshmen Wednesday night, meeting the meet with Tufts a doubleheader.

Temple and Bowdoin gym teams visit Technology Saturday afternoon in a triangular affair, the varsity swimmers visit Wesleyan and the freshmen swimmers meet Huntington School.

Coach Greene's wrestlers meet Syracuse at Syracuse.

The last event finds Technology boxers visiting New Hampshire in a return meeting, the Wildcats winning at Tech, 6 to 2, two weeks ago.

Maranville in Snappy Practice at Braves Camp

RABBIT SET FOR BIG SEASON

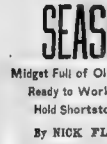
Midget Full of Old-Time Pep Ready to Work Hard to Hold Shortstop Berth

By NICK FLATLEY

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 4 —The Braves were full of ginger and pep as they settled down for their last week of spring practice today. Rabbit Maranville was on the job

The midget, who keeps right on being a fire brand despite the rushing years, is back for his seventeenth baseball year, just as exurberant and colorful as ever

He rolled into camp emitting loud "whoopees." He had a reunion with the old pals, Johnny Evers and Hank Gowdy. Then he gave three cheers, proceeded to borrow a glove and a uniform, and announced that he was ready.



Nick Flatley

The Rabbit is He's one of those rare mortals who never get out of condition. He's probably the most durable human being of the past two score years Time was when he was the bad boy of baseball

That time is past. Two years ago, he reformed. For one season, he was an old man His nervous system couldn't stand the battle against his naturally jovial and jubilant spirit.

But last season that fight was won and the Rabbit began to come. He put on a little weight during the wild year the Cardinals waged for the N. L. pennant. He was just about the best shortstop in the circuit, and he certainly was the outstanding Card in the world series

During the past winter, the tiny marvel has gained a few more pounds. He is right back in weight to where he used to be in the good old days. He's a real little iron man, as hard as a rock, and perfectly willing to work his ears off to get himself another regular job.

The Rabbit will be the regular shortstop, unless some physical change has hit him, something not at all evident to the naked eye. The regenerated Rabbit is now a resident of Rochester He has bought a home there and is on the way to being a very substantial citizen.

He arrived in camp on a Sunday morning, so that he could have one day of rest to get acclimated. The years have made him smart.

He admits that he trained all through the winter. He's cold in that Rochester, and the Rabbit put in daily hours skating. He also worked a lot of bicycle riding, touching his daughter stunts. And that's real exercise as anyone knows who has tried.

"I'll get in a couple of days, he said this morning. "I'm in shape now, but I know I'll have a lot of sore muscles tomorrow. But I'll go right along and work them off, and then that will be done with. Might as well get it over quickly.

"Great to be back with the old gang. Johnny tells me this club has real spirit. If it has, there's a chance for us to be up there. A team that fights stays in the pennant race. I've never seen that fail. And Johnny and Hank know how to keep it buzzing. They learned in the best school that ever happened. Under Stallings.

MOUND SQUAD AT B. U. SPEEDS UP WORK

Coach Dave Morey will speed up the work of Boston University battery candidates this week. Morey devoted the greater part of his time to meeting the men the first week and outlining his plans for the coming campaign.

The baseball men will have the exclusive use of the gym from now on as the basketball, wrestling, and fencing teams have finished their seasons and will no longer hold drills in the crowded gym.

None of the pichers have cut loose to any extent yet as Morey keeps a close eye on them and has given orders for light work up to the present time. Beginning today however, daily drills will be held instead of the three a week program as previously followed and the squad will round into condition before the end of the week and begin to get down to hard work.

MUST CUT SQUAD

Because of the large number of pitching prospects Morey will be forced to make a cut in the ranks of the twirlers before the squad gets outdoors, as the present number of pitchers is far greater than has turned out in past years. There are about 20 aspirants for mound duty and out of this number Morey keeps six to stay with the squad for the season

Bill Meader, star left hander, has been working out regularly with the squad for the past week and looks to be in great shape. He has been playing basketball all winter so is right down to his best weight and is anxious to get outdoors to start burning them in.

Arthur Murphy, a big boy with a fast ball but not too good control, is coming along slowly if he learns to find the plate with any degree of regularity he should earn a regular job and hang up a few victories.

Murphy was a star twirler at Abbott school in Farmington, Me., prior to entering B. U., but a dislocated shoulder has prevented him from doing much pitching for the last two years. He is making a determined effort to come back and so far seems to be having fair success.

WEAFER GOING WELL

At the present time Bill Weafer, former Woburn high school pitcher is the likeliest looking of the new candidates for twirling honors. He has a very high school record but time alone will determine how well he does against college batting.

Bunno Burns, three sports star from Charlestown, is making his presence felt among the pitchers and will have a lot to say before any final selections are made. Burns has plenty of stuff on the ball but his fielding holds him back.

He is handicapped by the loss of his left hand and must do all his fielding with his throwing hand.

Hank Julian and Phil Blume are the best of the new crop of catchers and will push the veteran Fred Pickard for the regular backstop assignment. Pickard has been the regular receiver for two years, however, and will not step aside without a battle. In addition to being a capable catcher Pickard is one of the very few .300 hitters last year.

Coach Morey intends to issue a call for the fielders Friday and although the St. Botolph at gym does not offer much room the infielders and outfielders will get an opportunity to loosen up their arms after a winter's idleness.

POLO

By BILL McAULEY

Chalk up another victory for the Crimson pony polo team, and an overwhelming one at that. Harvard mallet-men rode through the Yale trio with ease, especially in the first two chukkers when they scored 11 goals before the Blue had counted.

It was the second victory for the Harvard riders over Yale this season, but it was more pronounced for the first was gained by a single point during an extra chukker.

To outscore the Eli trio by a margin of fourteen goals is something to be proud of, especially in thirty minutes of play.

CRIMSON MEN STAR

George Clark, Eldridge Gerry and Tim Clark never played better and Tommy Glynn, who subbed for George during the second chukker, also showed to advantage by registering two goals during his short term in there

George Clark was high scorer with eight. Tim had five, Gerry one and Glynn two. One of these was lost, however, through two fouls committed by the Clark brothers

Eby Gerry, despite the fact that he only registered once, played a brilliant game the number two man always falling into the defence position when Tim Clark rode out to attack.

A lack of teamwork can be attributed to the utter rout of the Blue forces. Rathborne the number three player was the only one to hold his position.

RATHBORNE GOOD

Scott, Folger and Ferguson who played the other positions were at a loss when the Crimson got going and if Rathborne hadn't played such a brilliant defensive game the score would have been increased considerably.

The game was a disappointment to the large crowd, for it was expected that Yale would put up a much better fight.

However, many are inclined to underrate the Crimson trio. Its record speaks for itself. Undefeated, and with a goal average around 15 for each contest, the Crimson mallet wielders are going to prove a hard nut to crack in the intercollegiate indoor championships a New York this month

The Penn Military mallet-men came through with their second victory over Princeton Saturday the former winning by a margin of eight counters.

These are the only reverses the Orange and Black has met with during the past winter, and they are going to be heard from in the championships.

Hub Boxing Team for Dilboy Wars Picked

The entire Boston team that will fight in the big amateur interrit boxing tournament that Dilbo Post, V. F. W., will stage in K. of C Hall, Somerville, on Thursday night, has been selected, Dilboy officials announced.

Four divisions comprise the intercity classes to be contested against teams from New York and Philadelphia. The latter two teams have not yet forwarded their entries, but it is expected that these will be announced today.

WOODSIES LOOK GOOD OVER WEEKEND

By BILL McAULEY

The Woodsies staged a real comeback during the weekend despite the fact that they only acquired one point out of a possible four points. Had the Blue and Gold received a few breaks during its two battles it would have bagged a majority of the points involved.

In their matches with the Nationals Saturday the Hub eleven had tough luck in the closing stanzas after the score was tied at four all and they were fighting hard for victory and it looked as if both would bag the verdict.

But Tommy Murdoch, the Nationals goalie, was fortunate enough to be in the right position on every try.

The Woodsies were more unfortunate in their last game, an error by the referee depriving them of a tie with Fall River. The error came in the second period, when Fall River was leading two to one.

On a shot by Dave McEachren, with Harper out of his goal, Charlie McGill, the Marksmen's dependable fullback, dropped to his knees and stopped the ball on the goalline with both hands. It was a glaring penalty kick, but Referee Al White missed it, to the Woodsies' loss.

It was a regular Fall River-Boston battle, with no quarter given, and the referee fell in with the spirit, for he let everything go. As a result there were many injured limbs.

The domestic help problem is solved by using a Herald want ad. Such ads and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

MR. BOSTON By Jack Conway

"It would not take much urging to cause me to accept an invitation to visit one of the Southern training camps of the big league ball clubs," orated Mr. Boston as he paddled through a flock of puddles in Winthrop sq. today.

"After all," went on the veteran, "I think Paddy Waldron of Tampa, Fla. has the right idea on where to spend the Winter months. Paddy originally came from Boston. He is a brother of Charley Waldron who has been furnishing theatrical offerings here for years.

"A week ago I was sitting under a palm tree with Paddy at Miami Beach. Neither of us had on a hat and the warm breeze from the Atlantic Ocean fanned our faces. We didn't have on any coats either Just B. V. D.'s, flannel trousers, silk hose, sport shoes and sport shirts opened at the neck

"'You know I was born in Boston,' said Paddy. 'I shall always consider it my home city. My brother Charley still lives there. But when I sit out here in the open in the Winter I cannot help feeling sorry for my old friends and neighbors in Boston who are shoveling coal to keep from freezing and who carefully close every door and window so as to keep out of drafts.

"'I can also remember the heavy snow that used to be on the ground when I spent my Winters in the North. No, Sir, I don't care for that kind of a life any more. I can enjoy myself perfectly well sitting under one of these palm trees. Any Northerner who is half smart can do very well down here. I retired several years ago. And even though retired somehow or other I cannot help but make money.'

"I might mention that Paddy had $7,500 bet on Sharkey against Stribling. He was one of the few residents of Florida who didn't care who knew he was for Sharkey.

"With the Battle of the Palms over, Sharkey is entitled to considerable credit. He licked Stribling on his home grounds with thousands of his own supporters around the ring.

"Furthermore Jack Dempsey, the promoter, was rooting for Stribling to win. It was purely a matter of business with the former champion. He told this writer he felt he could knock Stribling out, while he added that he rated Sharkey as the best of the heavyweights and a dangerous puncher.

"If Stribling had won, Dempsey would have announced his come back. He would have signed to meet the Georgian at one of the New York ball parks. It is a different story now that Sharkey won. Dempsey does not care to meet the Boston contender again.

"Sharkey nailed me with three or four terrific punches in the first round of our bout at the Yankee Stadium', Dempsey told Johnny Buckley.

"'Jack merely happened to clip you right and probably wouldn't be able to repeat in a return bout', said Buckley as he tried to get Dempsey to sign for a bout with Sharkey.

"'You cannot kid me about Sharkey's ability to hit as I felt the power of his blows', remarked Dempsey.

"Sharkey found Stribling one of the easiest opponents he has ever been up against in a no-called bout fight. Stribling didn't offer nearly as much resistence as did Christner, McTigue and Godfrey. After the fourth round, Sharkey handled the Georgian easily. It was merely a question of how big a margin Sharkey was going to win by.

"Stribling gave up the battle when he started tossing left with right hand punches and was hit by hard left hooks to the body or right hand punches under the heart.

"When Stribling folded up, so did the Southern crowd From the end of the fourth round, Southerners around the ring kept yelling to Stribling:

"Come on and fight, W. L. Don't quit!"

"Stribling was dead on his feet during the last three rounds. He couldn't get out of the way of Sharkey's punches and didn't have the heart to fight back. It was a repetition of his miserable showing in the Berlenbach fight.

"The Georgian has had three major fights since he first fought Mike McTigue. They were with Berlenbach, Loughran and Sharkey. He lost all three of them. This indicates that the Georgian lacks that something that carries a fighter to a championship.

"Stribling will continue to star around the tank town circuit, but he will fail when put to the big test against first class opposition. Some critics might say he lacks a fighting heart, but I would prefer to declare he has not any combative spirit in his makeup."

St. Pete Chatter

Bobby Smith, sweet tenor, has a public. He warbled "Mother Machree" over the movietone the other day, and has been receiving mash notes and telegrams ever since.

He says that he will jump the club and go to Hollywood, if he isn't treated carefully

Bunny Hearn has recovered from trouble with his achilles heel, and went back to work today. The boil on his cheek has passed into history, also.

Al Moore, outfielder, is the cockiest chap on the club, and looks like a real ball player. He's sure of a job, if Harper continues to hold out.

Athletes by the dozen, come around every day, looking for a chance to work out with the team Used to be real estate agents, but now it seems to be ball players that infest Florida.

Johnny Evers and the Rabbit have promised to put on an exhibition around second base for the chronic fans who attend the practise sessions. With Hennery Gowdy catching, the trio will show the boys some 1914 stuff.

Doc Painter is working on Holshouser's wrist. The tall kid has a world of speed, but his curve is not so good. The Doc says that loosening that up will make everything O. K. If he's right, the club will have another real pitcher.

George Sisler and Zach Taylor, two of the oldest athletes, admit that they have been speeded up by the peculiar antics ordered by the chiropras. The Rabbit says he will be too fast, if he gets any more speed.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

IT is astonishing how many men worry because they do not have to shave every day. They get the notion that this is a sign of non-masculinity. Of and by itself absence of hair on the face has no significance.

Martha Lee Tells of Ideal Food-Drink

THIS TODDY KEEPS CONTROL OF YOUR WEIGHT, SAYS MARTHA LEE

POUR ONE GLASS COLD MILK INTO SHAKER
ADD ONE TO THREE TSPS OF THIS POWDER
ADD EGG AND VANILLA
SHAKE WELL
SERVE WITH YOUR FAVORITE CRACKERS

You can lose flesh or gain weight—and health—with this wholesome toddy.

HAVE you had your toddy today? The toddy we make in the Martha Lee Kitchen is an ideal food and drink for everyone. Delicious, bubbling over with health and strength for weary muscles—highly nutritious, yet so easily digested and quickly assimilated you feel new energy almost instantly.

The average diet is usually lacking in certain vital elements obtained in this delicious food product—life-giving vitamines, muscle-making milk proteins, energy-giving milk sugar, maltose and dextrose, bone-building lime and calcium. Unlike some preparations, however, this contains no milk butter fat, which might be a drawback to the would-be-thins. The average diet contains more fat than the body needs and too much fat tends to make one too fleshy and in children is apt to cause digestive trouble.

The powder we use is quickly made into a delicious hot or cold drink, milk shake, frosted chocolate, eggnog, highball or even frosting, candy, cakes or puddings.

For the eggnog illustrated today pour a glass of cool milk into a shaker, milk bottle or bowl. Sift gently on the top 3 heaping tsps. of toddy for each drink. Add 1 raw egg and a dash of vanilla. Shake or beat well (a little cracked ice or a little ice cream will make this dish even smoother and more delicious).

Hot toddy can be made either with hot water, hot milk or hot skimmed milk, using one, two or three heaping teaspoons of the powder for each cup. Work the powder into a paste in the bottom of the cup with a little water and then add the balance of the hot liquid, stirring briskly.

This product is ideal on either a reducing diet or one designed for the would-be plump. Milk, you know, builds good tissues—not soft, flabby fat. If those who wish to reduce would cut down on fats, sugars and starchy foods and drink plenty of milk from which the cream has been removed, with a generous assortment of bran, fruit, leafy salads and vegetables, the desired results would be promptly forthcoming.

For those who wish to gain, we suggest this delicious chocolate drink, made with whole milk, taken with your meals or between meals and before retiring. A raw egg and ice cream gives added nourishment. Eat whole wheat bread, bran muffins, whole wheat breakfast food, or flakes and plenty of leafy salads, vegetables and fruits, especially the citrus fruits.

I'll be glad to send you a booklet of recipes for making candy, cakes, cookies, frostings, etc., with this delicious wholesome product.

From the Tower

THE vegetable counters offer much for Lenten menus. The varieties of greens increase—beet greens are 12-20c a pound. Dandelion greens from local hot houses are a luxury, but other greens are reasonably priced. California cauliflower, white potatoes, turnips, carrots, radishes and celery are in liberal supply and cheap.

Increased acreage, good growing conditions and higher yields have made Florida oranges very plentiful, heavier this year than last. Excellent native Baldwin apples are 3 lbs for 25c. Citrus fruits are low priced, particularly lemons.

Prices on fresh pork jumped several cents a pound, but there are noticeable increases in the prices of some beef—rib roast is 33-38c lb to day. Brew beefs range from 18-24c lb. Bacon and ham are good buys.

Fresh halibut steak is only 40-52c lb. and haddock fillets 18-24c. Remember the birds with a few cents worth of suet—12-15c lb.

FRIED FISH

Use one tablespoon prepared mustard to each egg. Roll fish in egg and then bread crumbs or cracker meal. This gives more flavor to bland tasting fish.

DELICIOUS SAUCE FOR FISH

1 tbsp. butter.
1 tbsp flour.
1 egg yolk.
1 c. water.
1 tbsp. of prepared mustard.
½ tbsp. of salt.
1 tbsp. chopped parsley.

Melt butter, add flour, gradually add boiling water. Cook three minutes, remove from stove, add beaten yolk and cook two minutes longer, stirring all the time. Add seasoning. Serve hot.

Just Push a Button

ELECTRICAL devices accomplish an endless amount of work with much less annoyance and expense than would be involved if we hired it done. Remember the old fashioned washday? The total wreck that daddy found when he came home at night? Mother, was, oh, so tired. But look at the modern women. Father hardly knows if it is daughter or mother who mests him at the door.

Buy your electrical equipment carefully, selecting the reliable makes that will last a long time. Add one or two at a time to your home, before you know it electricity will be almost running your house for you.

From time to time I am going to have special articles on the different appliances and their uses. Meanwhile if you want any emergency advice, just drop me a line. I have tried out at least 57 of the different appliances and will be glad to give you the benefit of the experience.

A Sea Food That's Rich in Food Value

Originally crab meat was used as a substitute for lobster, but today with its fine appetizing and delicious flavor, crab meat claims an independent position and the demand for it is increasing rapidly.

Not only has crab meat a delicious flavor, but great food value, containing a large amount of proteins, glycogen and other nutritious elements including iodine.

We are told that goitre prevails among people depending upon foods with insufficient iodine; therefore Japanese canned crab meat is recommended for residents of the Great Lakes region, the Rocky Mountain district and the northwestern territory of the United States where there is so much suffering from goitre.

We, near the sea coast, can be content to enjoy Japanese crab meat, chiefly for its inimitable flavor, versatility and food value.

SALMON CROQUETTES

1 can of salmon.
3 medium potatoes.
1 tbsp. chopped celery.
2 hard-boiled eggs.
½ cup white sauce.
1 tsp. lemon juice.

Boil and mash the potatoes. Pick over the salmon. Chop the hard-boiled eggs. Combine all the ingredients. Mix thoroughly. Shape into croquettes. Dip in egg and then in flour. Cook to a golden brown in deep fat 340 F., two minutes. Serve with Lemon Sauce.

MOCK HOLLANDAISE

3 tbsp. butter.
1 tbsp. lemon juice.
2 egg yolks well beaten.
2 tbsps. flour.
½ tbsp. vinegar.
½ tsp. salt.

Melt butter in double boiler. Add flour. Add water gradually, stirring constantly. Cook until it thickens, stirring all the time. Continue cooking 5 minutes longer. Add salt and lemon juice. Pour the sauce onto the egg yolks, stirring all the time, and serve at once.

Need for Cereals

GROWING bones and teeth require the health-giving minerals and vitamins that are freely found in grain cereals and breakfast foods. Grains are nature's foods and they supply elements necessary to growth and nutrition. They are excellent with milk, but it is sometimes hard to get your children to eat them.

A judicious and reasonable amount of sugar added to these foods will work wonders in making them palatable, tasteful and enjoyable. No ingredient adds so much to the taste appeal of other foods. Sugar adds to the enjoyment of all kinds of fresh fruits and vegetables, so valuable in the diet of growing children.

Use sugar as a condiment in making healthful foods acceptable to the palate. Sweetness, as the perfect flavor in foods, stimulates the flow of saliva and of gastric juice, thereby aiding digestion, as well as enjoyment.

Medical authorities warn parents to guard the nutrition of their children. See that your children eat regularly of varied, nutritious foods—thereby being safeguarded against such diseases as tuberculosis. For better than your child be slightly overweight for the height and age than a single pound underweight. Sound nutrition is absolutely necessary to health and proper development.

Today's Short Story

CUPID RECAPTURED

PENELOPE wept.

She wept for two hours by the clock—and then decided to go outside and try to walk off her troubles.

For six days Ralph hadn't called or telephoned. She hadn't been able to reach him at his home address. And half an hour before she had seen him in a strange green roadster with a blonde woman. He was driving the roadster. The woman leaned intimately toward him. Penelope hadn't seen her face, but what did that matter.

So, sat down and wrote a note to Ralph releasing him from his engagement. And with a pang signed herself "Sincerely."

Everywhere outside were signs of spring—reminders of love—love that was lost to her forever.

She tried not to listen to the little birds singing in Central Park, playing in the premature spring sunshine.

An organ man grinding out "Sweet Rosy O'Grady" nearly overwhelmed her, but she went on resolutely trying to forget—love.

Perhaps riding on the subway for a long time, would distract her—just riding on and on. She heard you could go 30 miles on the subway for a nickel.

And she hadn't much more than a nickel to spare, she'd had heavy expenses all winter—earning only a stenographer's pay, sending money back West to her folks. Saturday or Sunday afternoon she and Ralph went to a matinee—but today.

She got on a subway and began riding. She rode and rode until finally the guard suggested that she had gotten her nickel's worth and might as well get out.

Sadly she went up into the street and found herself in the desolation of Coney Island before the season. Gaunt roller coasters, dead merry-go-rounds, boarded hot-dog stands, the ocean coldly beating on the hard sands. Here was a place in harmony with her mood. She strolled out to the end of a long pier to engage in melancholy thought. Sitting on the edge of the pier was a young man dangling his legs, a nice-looking, but dejected young man.

He looked at her angrily as though she were an unwelcome interruption to serious thoughts. She returned his glance, and sat on the other side of the pier.

Finally he had to talk to her, because her sitting there so long irritated him.

"What are you doing out here?" he asked curtly.

"What are you?" she responded "Oh, I'm just sitting here thinking," he said suddenly, "everything's wrong. I feel like jumping in the ocean."

"Don't do that!" There was a little catch in her tone. "On such a beautiful day—besides I feel just as badly as you do. Worse perhaps."

"You couldn't feel worse." He moved over next to her. His name, he said, was Jack Hale. He told her about his sweetheart, Grace O'Day, who had eloped just 24 hours before with his best friend and that since there was no faithfulness in the world, he'd about decided it wasn't a fit place to live in.

She told him about Ralph, and the green roadster, and the strange woman.

"Who are you?" the young man asked Penelope. She told him that she was practically nobody, just a girl from a small western town who was trying to make a living in New York—a girl who had fallen in love with a fickle man.

He explained that he was practically nobody, too, but a man who wrote plays that usually ended their runs before they got nearer than Hoboken—although he explained with dignity that the play he was writing at the moment would make the world sit up and take notice.

She was impressed and wanted to hear all about it. "A real live playwright," she kept murmuring. Well, he had a copy of his latest play at his apartment, but he could give her a brief idea of it.

And so they found themselves at the end of the pier in each other's arms, with the bright sun laughing at them, and the silver tipped waves mocking them.

Penelope drew herself away, blushing. "It sounds wonderful," she said. "Sometime I would like to hear about all of your plays."

"And sometime I would like to. There's one about a young man and a young woman who thought love was lost to them—and that there was no such thing as happiness.

"They met on the end of a pier, these two young people, and found that the ending of love could sometimes be also—the beginning."

Penelope smiled at him. He smiled at her. The little dog rolled joyously between them. There was a spring in the air, and the world was young again.

WINTER CONSERVE

Pare and slice 4 lbs. of apples. Cook them with 1 lb. of seeded raisins, 1 pt. of water and 1 pt. of grapefruit juice, until the apples are soft. Add 2 lbs. of sugar and cook until thick, stirring to prevent scorching. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal when cool.

Correct Manners

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

What is the proper procedure for a young man about to become engaged? Should he ask the consent of the father, as the girl has no mother, and if so what would be about the best way to do so?

O. T. T.

THE would-be fiance makes an appointment with the girl's father, and has a chat with him as to his "intentions," his prospects and his future plans in general. Usually the father has affectionately watched the affair develop and he is not too surprised when he is asked for this appointment. this very important appointment. And usually, too, especially when the girl has no mother, he is very tender and friendly in his willingness to help the young couple make their plans.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please advise me through your column what initials are proper on flat silver after marriage? I have almost a complete set which I received as a wedding gift with my maiden initials, and I have recently added a number of pieces to the set and I am not quite sure if it is proper now to continue my maiden initials on the additional pieces, or should I use my marriage initials?

MRS. O. K.

THIS is as you wish. If you wish to have the monogramming match, use the same initials. Usually the silver acquired after marriage is engraved with the married initials.

The RETURN OF OLD KING BRADY

Revived by Merle W. Hersey

The Adventures of Great Detective Recounted

CHAPTER 1

In this chapter Old King Brady is called in on a blackmail case. He interviews the banker and police chief, and plans to round up some circus fakirs who have kidnaped the Governor's grandchild.

EARLY in the month of October, the year of the hotly contested election of 19—, the world-famous detectives of the Brady Bureau of New York City received a telephone message from the chief of the United States Secret Service Bureau to proceed to Buffalo and to be at Brezzell's Hotel on Seneca st. at 9 o'clock the next morning. Accordingly at 9 o'clock the Bradys found themselves in the parlor of their hotel suite, waiting for they knew not whom, prepared to under take they knew not what. While not, strictly speaking, secret service detectives the Bradys have an arrangement with the United States Government under which their services can be claimed at any time. The firm consisted of Old King Brady, Young King Brady and Miss Alice Montgomery, the skilful female sleuth, whose successful work had already began to attract widespread notice.

When "Mr. Smith" was announced the detectives saw they had to do business with the chief of the United States Secret Service Bureau himself.

"I see the whole firm is here," he remarked, after greetings had been exchanged. "I suppose you are surprised to see me, but here I am with a matter as simple as it is important, up my sleeve." Turning to Old King Brady, he said, "Do you know ex-Governor Strong of Illinois?"

Old King Brady had heard of the ex-Governor but did not know him personally.

"Strong is now running for the United States Senate out there," continued the chief. "Up to a week ago he was certain of election, but now he is in trouble. The President is warm friend of his, has requested that you be engaged to help him out."

"Certainly we shall not refuse the President of the United States," replied Old King Brady.

"Good! Here is the situation: While governor, Strong wrote three damaging letters to a certain politician of the opposition party. He assures me he is ruined politically if they are published. He has tried to regain possession of the letters and succeeded in prevailing upon the man who held them to deposit them in the National Bank of Spruce Ridge, a suburb of Chicago. The bank was broken into four days ago and these letters stolen. They are now being used to blackmail the Governor. If one hundred thousand dollars is not forthcoming by November 1, the letters will be given to a newspaper in Chicago. There is your case, Mr. Brady. The Governor wants these letters."

"We will get busy at once," said Old King Brady.

After the chief had departed, Young King Brady was loud in his expressions of disgust. "If they had told us over the telephone we might have been in Chicago now."

And to Chicago they went. Leaving Alice in town to see if she could pick up any information about the letters, Harry proceeded to St. Louis to interview Governor Strong.

Old King Brady went alone to interview the president of the National Bank at Spruce Ridge. On his way up from the station he noticed that the town had been billed the week before for "Riffaldi's Circus and Jungle Show." He whistled softly, for about a month previously certain information of an interesting nature had been given him by a detective in Cincinnati about this circus.

"I am here as a Secret Service man," the old detective explained to Mr. Peterson. "My mission is to recover Governor Strong's letters and deliver them to the chief of the Secret Service Bureau."

Mr. Peterson looked annoyed "Hum-er-why, they should by rights be delivered to me."

"I know nothing of that. I must obey orders. May I ask how this burglary was managed?"

Mr. Peterson explained that the bank had been entered from the rear, inch bars had been cut through and the window forced The safe had been blown open Sixty thousand dollars and some bonds had also been taken. Old King Brady got the time of the burglary and left.

He went direct to the chief of police, Mr William Mungo. As soon as the chief saw the long blue coat, with its double row of brass buttons, the old-fashioned stock and stand-up collar and the big white felt hat, with its extraordinary wide brim, he was ready to pay attention. Old King Brady is readily recognized by all who are interested in him because of this peculiar costume.

"I suppose you are here about the bank robbery?" said Mr Mungo greeting the old detective with enthusiasm.

"It was the work of burglars, sir I have seen many blown safes and I am satisfied that this was done with nitroglycerine, in the style of the yeggs."

"What day did Riffaldi's circus leave town, chief?"

"Thursday morning—the bank was robbed Friday night."

"Where did they go? I am asking because I have a list of robberies which have occurred directly after visits of this particular circus."

"I don't know. It never occurred to me to suspect the circus people."

"What sort of show do these people put on?"

"Regular fakers. They have a couple o elephants, a kangaroo, a big bob-cat, which they bill as a young tiger, and a few horses. Yet they seem to draw wide."

"An elephant always draws a crowd."

With a little more conversation about general matters, the old detective left the office and returned to Chicago. Alice had nothing to report. But somewhat to Old King Brady's surprise Harry returned with Governor Strong, who was in a state of considerable excitement.

"The matter has taken a new turn," said the governor. "The wretches have kidnaped my little granddaughter. I shall have to give up."

"When did this occur?" asked Old King Brady.

"This yesterday afternoon. Read that. I received it this morning." And the governor handed over a letter, which read:

"Governor Strong: Since you have paid no attention to our demands we have taken one to get action. We have your grandchild, and you will never see her alive again until you follow our instructions.

"Tomorrow night at eleven o'clock be at the old sawmill at Springton, Illinois. Come alone, and bring $100,000 in cash. If you fail the corpse of little Mabel will be left on her parents' doorstep at Grandon within forty-eight hours.

"THE COMMITTEE."

Old King Brady passed the letter over to Alice, and turned to Governor Strong. "Where is Grandon?" he asked.

"About halfway between here and St. Louis."

"And this Springton, is it near Grandon?"

"It is on a branch of the main railroad about 25 miles from Grandon."

"You are determined to yield?" continued the old detective.

"I must. My daughter is nearly insane. I had almost made up my mind to abandon my long fight for the senatorship and let the letter come out when little Mabel disappeared."

"I don't agree with you, and do not believe these people will harm little Mabel. However, we have 24 hours to work in, so let's make the best of it."

Old King Brady had been studying the governor closely. "See here, we are not unlike in appearance. I think I could make up so that none but our intimates could tell us apart. I'm going to keep this appointment for you."

The governor hesitated.

"Don't lose heart, whatever you do," said Old King Brady. "I have a theory and if it is correct the child is safe. I believe the finding of the letters and the consequent blackmailing the result of accident. These men are out for what they can get. They bid high, expecting you to offer less. You did not reply to their first threat, so they have resorted to kidnaping and more threats, which they do not intend to carry out."

After some further conversation the governor withdrew.

"Alice has failed to learn anything" the old detective informed Harry, "and I am strucken on the theory that there are a couple of yeggs attached to Riffaldi's circus who are the men we want."

"Where is the circus now?"

"I don't know, but that is what we want to find out, Alice."

"Yes, Mr. Brady."

"I want you to get into that circus company, so think up some scheme tonight. Harry and I will keep the governor appointment. It is all nonsense to give up to those people."

Which were Old King Brady's views when he went to bed that night.

Woman Sleuth Plays a Part in Many Thrilling Situations

'The Abercrombie Mystery'; by Carolyn Wells, a Fine Novel Complete in Six Days

A Tanagra figurine, so unconsciously lovely was her posture. Her golden brown hair was of a natural curl, her eyes, amber colored, were inscrutable, and she looked at her stepfather with a blank air. Was he to get no sympathy from anyone?

"Maisie," he said, "your mother couldn't have been—er,—poisoned, could she?"

"No," said the girl, judicially. "No, I should say not! She's too smart to let anybody put it over her like that."

"I didn't mean—what you mean I mean—you know—would she take it herself?"

"Hell, no! And she wasn't poisoned, anyway. Acute indigestion, more likely, or something of that sort. I'll be down in a few moments, Dad, don't make a fool of yourself till I get there."

Then Hugh Abercrombie turned his steps toward his wife's bedroom. "Have you called the doctor?" he asked, and Miss Mercer replied:

"Yes, Doctor Garth will be right over."

Moving slowly, Hugh sat down on the edge of the bed.

Motherless husband sat, staring at his wife as at some inexplicable mystery, and then the doctor arrived.

Garth, the family physicain for many years, was a handsome man, with gray hair and a gray Van Dyke beard. He had an air of competent authority, and dismissed Hugh and the two women, after which expeditiously and with great care he made his examination and investigation.

Then he went downstairs and found Abercrombie in the breakfast room, with Maisie.

The house, Graysands, was on one of the small bays on the north shore of Long Island.

Doctor Garth accepted a cup of coffee, then looking at the others, began to talk.

"There is no occasion for secrecy," he said, "Mrs. Abercrombie is out of danger, and the effects of bichloride of mercury."

There were four at the table beside the speaker. Abercrombie, Maisie Miss Mercer, the dead woman's secretary, and a guest named Murgatroyd Loring.

Maisie, her spoonful of melon arrested halfway to her mouth, sat as if paralyzed, her eyes big with horror and her rouged lips parted.

Miss Mercer made no outward sign, but her blue eyes travelled from one face to another, and her delicate, fair skin seemed to glow a little pinker.

"Who gave her bichloride of mercury?" asked Hugh, his voice soft voice harsh with accusation.

"We do not know that any one gave it to her," Garth answered. "It may be that she took it herself, by accident, let us say—"

"Eileen was not the sort to take poison by accident," was the doctor's curt rejoinder.

"Where would the—the stuff come from? How could she get it?" Hugh persisted.

"Those things are questions for the authorities."

"The police!" cried Maisie, in a low, horrified whisper. "Ooooh!"

"You see," the doctor went on, addressing Abercrombie, "I cannot give a certificate as the matter stands. It has to be reported and the coroner will advise us if an inquest is necessary."

"Aren't you forging ahead rather fast ,doctor?" asked Loring. Murgatroyd Loring, or, as he was always called, Troy Loring, was a cousin of Mrs. Abercrombie's first husband. He spent much of his time at Graysands, and though no favorite of Hugh's was always made welcome.

He was an able business man, and kept Eileen's financial affairs in shape. His principal claim to obnoxiousness lay in the fact that he wanted to manage everything Hugh ignored him: "Will you see to it, Doctor?"

"Yes," replied Garth and addressed Loring. "Don't be foolish, Mr. Loring; I will call Garrett now."

"I wish I knew a little more about Mrs. Abercrombie's illness,' said Hugh. "Miss Mercer, can you tell me just how long she had been feeling indisposed?"

"I know only what I chanced to observe," Miss Mercer replied putting her sleek red hair. "Mrs. Abercrombie had planned some work for me last Friday morning But said she was not feeling well and the work must be postponed. It had never been taken up, for each day, for the mail was attended to, she felt too ill to do more."

"But why didn't I know," asked Abercrombie, looking surprised.

"If your wife was so ill she had to put off her secretary for two or three days, it would seem she was ill enough to attract your attention," remarked Loring, "that is, unless your attention was centered elsewhere."

Miss Mercer caught her breath and, Maisie, rising, took a seat at her father's side.

Then the doctor Garth came back.

The advent of the police seemed like a general uprising; but resolved itself into three reporters, Percy Van Antwerp, come to see Maisie, an emissary from the doctor's office, with a note, and three men from Headquarters.

As they mounted the steps to the great front verandah, Detective Sergeant Downing in the lead, they were met by Loring and escorted into the house.

So thoroughly did Downing understand his business, that in a short time he had all the principal members of the household before him.

He had chosen a small reception room for his use, and he set to work systematically.

"Your wife has been ill?" he asked of Hugh Abercrombie, a note of sympathy in his gruff voice, "what ailed her?"

"My mother had chronic indigestion," Maisie broke in, "she had it a long time."

"Did Doctor Garth attend her for it?" snapped the questioner.

"Sometimes," Maisie replied. "Sometimes she just took the medicine he prescribed. She always had it on hand."

Maisie sat between Hugh Abercrombie and Van Antwerp. He was a privileged friend of the family and especially of Maisie. About forty, tall and slim, with thick hair, dark and light blue eyes, he was so elegant of manner that Maisie called him the Perfect Percy.

He was one of Maisie's suitors, looked upon as harmless, and came as he chose, having his present quarters at the Abercrombie Arms.

The examination took some time but the net result produced little of value. Miss Mercer repeated her story of Mrs. Abercrombie's indisposition Dr. Garth admitted that she might have taken the poison of her own volition but insisted that he could not reconcile such an action with her temperament.

"We can not judge," said Downing, "whether the poison was taken by accident or administered."

"Nonsense, man," came in a ringing voice from Maisie. "You make it sound like a murder mystery. My mother wasn't murdered! For that in a pasteboard container and that stuff by accident. There's no law against that, and we're trouble enough here, without your trying to turn things into a cobweb party. Get your facts if you want to, but I've had a good deal of fun, but don't try to put on a Great Sleuth act, you old Cottage Pudding!"

The lightning changes that crossed Downing's face were comical, or would have seemed so had the occasion been less grave.

"Now, Maisie," Abercrombie," he said, as calmly as if she had said nothing unusual. "I'll be glad of some help from you. When did you first hear of your mother's illness?"

"Last Thursday night. We had had a tea party in the new Japanese tea-house. Well, she didn't come to dinner, and that evening she looked down and out."

"Did she repeat that experience?"

"Well no," Maisie looked thoughtful. "But she was ailing a little Friday and Saturday, and on Sunday she cut out a party that I know she wanted awfully to go to."

"Mr. Abercrombie," Downing began, "have you any reason to believe your wife would have taken poison of her own volition?"

"Most assuredly not," was the reply.

"Have you any reason to think any one would have given it to her with a wrong motive?"

"At this tea entertainment, what did Mrs. Abercrombie eat? Is it known?" Downing looked inquiringly at the maid and the secretary, but it was Maisie who answered.

"No, she never ate anything at a party. I asked her to have a sandwich but she only shook her head. Last I saw of her she was sitting over a cup of tea."

"Ah, and who gave it to her?" Maisie stared.

"I dunno. Guess she helped herself. But there was no poison around to put in it, if that's what you're getting at."

"Was Mrs. Abercrombie in the habit of drinking anything?"

"She was not," intervened Doctor Garth.

"You were present at the house festivities. Mr. Abercrombie?" asked Downing.

"I was about the grounds most of the time, yes."

"Did she dine with the family that evening?"

"I don't recall," he began, but Maisie interrupted.

"Course you don't, Dad, you weren't there yourself No, Eileen didn't come to the table Friday night. I had a few of my boy friends to dinner, and a couple of girls. You remember, Miss Mercer?"

"Yes," said Miss Mercer, without a smile.

Clairvoyance was not required to perceive that the secretary did not entirely approve of the daughter of the house.

"And Saturday? And Sunday?"

"Lemmesee. Sunday night, Eileen came to the table, but she left before we finished. Then, Monday night, she had her dinner in bed, and—and it was Monday night she died."

Maisie broke down and, turning to Abercrombie, laid her head on his shoulder and gave way to sobs. Hugh put an arm around her and stroked her temple with a slow, soothing gesture.

Percy Van Antwerp rose and came to them, saying, "Come, Maisie, for a little stroll in the fresh air." And the two went out together.

The secretary, the maid, and the butler successively questioned

'Reno'; An Amazing Story of America's Mad National Dance of Divorce

By CORNELIUS VANDERBILT Jr.

CHAPTER 13

WITH the dawn, Felicia had become ominously calm, and Dick, watching her while they listened to Ann's story of the kidnaping, wished that she would return to her hysteria. Her face was drained of color; against its transparent pallor her eyes were dark like holes.

Dr. Tom was talking to two plain clothes men in the living-room below; Peg was petting J B. on the telephone.

"We'd better get hold of Alex first." It was Felicia's voice, devoid of all expression. She sat still clutching the little pillow, still in her dance frock of green chiffon.

Mr. Brett, the hotel clerk told them, had checked out the evening before. No, he had left no forwarding address, but the clerk understood he was returning to the East.

Felicia received that news without comment.

J. B. arrived. There seemed nothing to do, yet they had to do something. Dick went out with J. B., to venture below the line, into Reno's "wide-open" quarter, to see if there they could trace the kidnapers.

"Darling, won't you us down?" Won't you—" Ann Hodge looked at Felicia sympathetically.

She shook her head

Dr. Tom came in, the bruise on his cheek grotesquely brilliant with mercurochrome. "Better drink some coffee, Felicia—Peg's getting it ready."

Felicia only looked at him—with eyes that seemed blind.

It was a bright morning, golden sunlight poured warmly through the windows. Somewhere, in the mounting heat of this summer day, little Alex, in pajamas and bare feet, was crying for her. . . .

A child shouted outside and Felicia screamed. Relief brightened Ann's face as the girl gave way to hysterics. Like a nurse attending a helpless baby, she undressed her and tucked her into bed

What could they do? What was there to do?

Dick and J. B. returned, and Felicia dressing-gown and hurried down the stairs, her eyes beseeching them for news.

Dick shook his head.

"Look here, doctor," J. B. ad dressed Tom Hodge suddenly "Could Mr. Nevada help? Would he?"

Dr. Tom nodded. "If anyone can do anything he can." But there was little hope in his grave face. You must get him to telephone, so there's no use trying. Take Dick's car and run down there.

And then, as if to himself, as J. B. hurried out, "His millions against Brett's, and back of it all—divorce! That's the one power that hurls the boy."

Dick was sitting beside Felicia on the couch, his arm about her, one was looking straight ahead. She did not seem conscious that he even existed.

Mr. Nevada, the doctor told Dick, was the most powerful man in the State. He had a real name, but few people bothered to use it. Politician, financier, business man, he was Nevada's wealthiest and most distinguished citizen. He owned most of the resorts, controlled a lion's share of the mines, knew everyone, in every rank of life. And he would be able to work through channels unknown even to the police.

"If only he'll do it!" Peg sighed.

Across the mountainside, where little Alex lay, an old man with streaming white hair, picked his way slowly to Virginia City.

Ragged and dirty though he was, intelligence gleamed in his clear eyes. Through the blurr of his white beard, his mouth was sensitive, well formed.

He was a Desert Rat, one of the dozens of half-mad or merely broken-hearted denizens of the barren spaces. His shoes were worn through although the pockets of his sagging coat bulged with several thousand dollars worth of precious and semi-precious stones picked up in the wastes.

A faint sound arrested him. His eyes strained ahead. Then, with amazing swiftness, he darted forward. There was a swish, a thud, as his heavy stick struck squarely upon the head of the sidewinder shifting to strike.

The Desert Rat had seen many strange things between the dawns and sunsets that had tolled the passing of his life, yet there was wonder in his face as he lifted the child in his arms and unbound the handkerchief that stilled the trembling lips. He did not see many children and he gazed upon this boy as though he were a curiosity.

"Where did you come from?" he asked.

Little Alex sobbed out his terror against the thin shoulder. Whoever the strange creature might be, his voice was gentle and his hands were kind.

Interrupted by gulps and choked sobbing the child told his story as best he could.

"And what's your name, Sonny?" Alex!

"Alex? Alex what? What's your daddy's name?"

"My father's Alexander Brett."

With a sudden relaxation of his sinewy arms the Rat let Alex slide down to the ground. A look of hatred distorted the sun-browned features.

"Good God, it can't be!" he muttered. "This boy's too young! Alexander Brett must be 70!"

The child whimpered, then was silent. The sound of a falling stone clattered ominously close.

A dark face appeared over the ledge of rock and the Desert Rat looked up into the glittering muzzle of an automatic.

'THE ABERCROMBIE MYSTERY'; NEW SIX-DAY NOVEL

agreed that they knew no motive for suicide nor any way the poison could have been administered maliciously.

Downing then gave way to Garret, the coroner, who, after asking perfunctory questions turned to Abercrombie.

"Were you and your wife on good terms?"

Hugh jerked up his head as if at a spear thrust. His eyes blazed and then, as suddenly, his icy calm returned and he relaxed as he replied:

"Perfectly so. We have been married ten years and have never had an unpleasant word."

"You can think of no one who would have intentionally brought about or connived at her death?"

"I cannot believe I am sure the poison was taken by mistake."

"You are also sure Mrs. Abercrombie had no reason for taking her own life?"

"I am positive of that."

Garrett was about to say something further when Eric Redmayne, partner and long time friend of Abercrombie, walked in. He was a tall, slim chap, with the air of an athlete, a mane of fair hair and a pair of smiling gray eyes. He gave Hugh a warm handclasp as he sat beside him.

The Coroner made a little headway as Downing as far as establishing any tangible facts leading to a solution of the mystery.

Questions directed to Hugh elicited the information that a Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael and a Mr. Robertson, friends of the family, had been guests for a few days preceding the tragedy and the Coroner reaching the end of his rope announced that an inquest would be arranged for.

Garth followed the Coroner out and a silence fell, as those who were left, realized what impended.

Miss Mercer sprang into action first, and dismissed the servants.

She then turned to Hugh.

"I'm wondering," she said, "if I may not be dismissed I was engaged by Mrs. Abercrombie, and now, I can see no reason for remaining."

"But," interposed Eric Redmayne, "it is not at all certain that the police will let you go."

"The police! What have they to say about it?"

"Probably a great deal," put in Troy Loring, who could seldom keep out of any controversy.

"I don't think you'll be allowed to go, Miss Mercer," Redmayne said, decidedly. "As Mrs. Abercrombie's secretary, I'm sure they'll keep you here a few days. Why not make up your mind to it?"

His smile met stony blue eyes and Miss Mercer looked a little stubborn.

But she only said, "Very well, I'll speak to Doctor Garth about it," and walked out.

Hugh, Redmayne and Loring were left alone.

"Let's face this thing squarely," Redmayne began, in his decidedly way.

"I'll say so," Troy Loring agreed.

"You seemed to give the Coroner as information, Hugh. As to Eileen, I mean," said Redmayne.

"I told them all I knew. I still think she took this poison by accident. Say, two bottles in the medicine cabinet. Same size and appearance. One could easily pick up the wrong one."

"Yes," Loring said, "but all that will come out in the evidence. If there are two such bottles and it can be shown that such a mistake was, or could have been made, that will give something to work on, you see. But as yet, we have no evidence, no clues."

"Clues!" and Hugh shuddered. "God make it sound like a murder mystery."

Maisie and Percy Van Antwerp came in together through the open French window.

It was evident that Van Antwerp was deeply in love with the girl. She sat on the arm of Hugh's chair, one slender arm flung round his shoulders. "Poor Daddy," she said, "poor Bobo," going back to her childish name for him. "Well, never mind, dear, now you can marry Lorna."

The small and highly exclusive settlement of Crescent Cove, on the outskirts of which Graysands stood, was knocked galley-west by the news of the death of Eileen Abercrombie.

Unable to get at the Graysands people, the suspicious besieged Doctor Garth, who gave them no satisfaction, and Van Antwerp, who gave them less.

Somehow the hint of poison was whispered, and repeated with exaggerations, until the whole place rang with conjectures. Eileen Abercrombie was elevated to the position of a saint and on every side were ramblings of vengeance against a possible human instrument that might have brought about her death.

To escape the driving, pounding questions Van Antwerp thought seriously of begging sanctuary at the Abercrombie home. A long time friend of Eileen's and now a devoted admirer of Maisie, he felt he would be welcomed in this emergency, for he was a general favorite, always pleasantly polite, though he invited no confidences and offered none.

It was Tuesday afternoon: Eileen had not yet been dead twenty four hours; the autopsy had disclosed that she had died of poison but pending the inquest set for the morrow the coroner advanced no opinion as to how it had been administered.

Van Antwerp sitting on the porch of the Inn wondering if Maisie would see him that evening saw a lithe figure jump from a motor and enter the Inn office. Dawning recognition came to him; surely he knew him—it must be—it was Kenneth Carlisle, famed from one end of the land to the other as the screen actor par excellence, a movie hero who had won all hearts from managers to flapper's, a motion picture star who and turned his back on his profession at the height of his fame to take up detective work.

Was that why he was here? Was Carlisle interested in solving the mystery of Mrs. Abercrombie's death?

3-MINUTE TRIPS

By TEMPLE MANNING

SERBIA is a country of peasants.

There is no hereditary upper class, and no middle class to speak of. American tourists who visit this quaint Balkan state are apt to be particularly impressed by the fact that the number who wear European clothes, who have received European educations, and who occupy themselves with "white-collar" jobs is very small. Nine-tenths of the people are farmers; small farmers who get out of the soil what to them is a comfortable living, and who have no desire to do any more than this.

Belgrade, the capital, presents a somewhat different picture, of course with its urban population—a population which manages, nevertheless, to retain most of the characteristics of a rural people. Its quaint market places, colorful bazaars and narrow winding streets are typical of the Balkans, and American travlers will find them reminiscent of operetta and musical comedy settings.

Pirot, perhaps the industrial center of the nation, is noted for its rugs, carpets and cigarettes, the latter being especially prized by the Balkan connoisseur.

But outside of these cities, and Leskovats, with its rope-walks, Serbia is a land of farmers.

Native costumes and ornaments are especially colorful, sometimes leaning toward the bizarre. They are the rule here, rather than the exception, and the tourist need not wait for a feast day to witness a pageant of peasant plumage.

HOSTESS SEEKS HER PRINCE

Every young girl dreams of the Prince Charming who in some mysterious way is to woo and win her. Such were the dreams that filled the pretty head of Betty Leness, 20, senior at Simmons College, and a perfect type of modern American girl.

The thoughts of a Prince Charming were alluring, but where to find him?

Her graceful personality and attractive features came to the attention of Hugo Ormo, proprietor of Hugo's Restaurant, at 150 Boylston st. He at once sensed her potential value as a hostess and the means of attaining her heart's desire were at hand.

The thought entered her mind that the ideal place to find the man of her choice was a high grade eating place where gathered persons of means and discrimination. Hugo Ormo's offer came as a providential dispensation.

Maybe some beau has already altered her heart strings, but she is withholding the news.

YOENG'S BILL IS HELD OVER

By popular request, Harry King, manager of Yoeng's Kenmore restaurant at Kenmore station, will hold over for all this week the talent featuring "A Week in the Jungles."

All last week Yoeng's catered to record breaking crowds and Saturday night was forced to turn hundreds away. Billy Stone, master of ceremonies opens the show in a hunting scene. Going through the jungles he comes across several savages, which he in turn down and encourages them to dance. And maybe they don't dance to the jungle music of Henry Davis and his orchestra. Three performances are given daily, beginning at the noon luncheon.

COLLEEN MOORE SIGNS TO MAKE TALKIE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, March 4—Colleen Moore has succumbed to the talkies. After months of indecision she has been influenced to break her silence. "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" turned the trick. Colleen's voice had no harsh tones when it was microphoned or Vitaphoned some months ago, but she was timid and hesitant about accepting the new invention.

Then came "Broadway Melody" and "In Old Arizona." Not even such a conservative as Colleen could remain in doubt any longer that the talkies are the thing.

"When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" has been in the First National family for some time, and Colleen has been on the point of filming it. It is based on Ernest Ball's love ballad, and has been scenarized by Herman Ruby, Norman Spencer and Ray Perkins. James Hall, who knows something of the exigencies of the microphone will play opposite Miss Moore.

NOT all is rhythm and music and light these days in the talkies. Occasionally there is something heavy just to balance the diet. For instance, Famous-Players-Lasky is about to step forth with "The Infidious Mr. Fu Manchu," a tale of the Boxer Rebellion, with enough thrills to please the most thrill-seeking audience.

Warner Oland, who has played many a Chinese part in many a Chinese picture, will have the title role. Neil Hamilton, Jean Arthur, C. H. P. Heggie, William Austin, Claude King, Noble Johnson and Lawford Davidson are in this very English all-talkie cast. Rowland V. Lee will direct.

A WISE man of my acquaintance prophesies that the Swan song of the stage will soon be sung. If the third dimension of movies is perfected so as to give depth to the shadow stage, the talkies will so outclass the legitimate stage that competition will be too great to bear. Every day we hear of some new plan.

Louis Brock and Al Boasberg, two well-known figures in this industry, are said to have a contract with RCA to make a series of two and three-reel pictures, to be produced simultaneously in French, German, Spanish and of course, English.

These short novelties will be produced partly in New York and partly on the West Coast. And it is the purpose of these two enterprising young men to get all the high-priced vaudeville talent.

JUST so that I can be the first with the news let me whisper something in your ear. Stepin Fetchit, the colored actor in "Hearts of Dixie," is going to be a hit. Not even Charles Gilpin in "Emperor Jones" can claim more histrionic honors than this colored boy whose comedy is so excellent you long to see more of him when the pictures audit.

The Fox company has really achieved something in "Hearts of Dixie," an all-negro picture.

THE Joneses and the Smiths have always lamented the popularity of their names. The Browns, of course, have run a close second but their wail has not been as loud. Joe E. Brown, funny face comedian who made "Little Mousie" popular all over the country, now asks us to say in this column that he is Joe E. Brown. He says he asks for this explanation because there are four Browns, all actors. One look at Joe E. Brown and I don't believe anybody would ever mistake him for anybody else and I don't mean that unkindly for he is one of my favorite actors.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Buster Keaton and Natalie Talmadge. Keaton acting as hosts at an informal barbecue. Mrs. Ned Marin demonstrating that she is glad to have Phyllis Haver for a sister-in-law by giving a shower for her. Corinne Griffith making her plans to see Edit. Hope to see her there. Lupe Velez spending a week's salary on telephone and telegraphing to Gary Cooper. Gary showing his loyalty by dining alone at Lupe's house each night. Four of Warner's song writers looking the pretty girls over at the Warner studio. Cecil De Mille establishing a record by completing his picture in a short time. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

America Must Be Roused to Increasing Menace of Narcotic Evil

AMERICA must be wakened to the increasing menace of the narcotic drug evil. Congress has enacted legislation for the rehabilitation of drug addicts on federal prison farms. The Legislatures of several states are increasing the penalty for the crime of drug peddling. A number of states and cities, including New York, are establishing hospitals for the treatment of unfortunate drug victims.

THIS IS NOT ENOUGH. THE DOPE SITUATION IN THE UNITED STATES IS TERRIBLY SERIOUS. INVESTIGATORS HAVE FOUND THAT THE DEEPER THEY GO INTO THE PROBLEM, THE MORE SERIOUS IT BECOMES. THE PERCENTAGE OF MEN AND WOMEN ADDICTED TO DRUGS IN THIS COUNTRY IS SHOCKINGLY LARGE AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING.

Fortunately, it is possible to cure drug addiction in most cases, but it is rather difficult to keep the victims cured, because the dope peddlers and the scum of the medical profession who live on drug addicts consider them natural customers. If one is cured, the dope dealers and devil doctors make most vigorous efforts to get them back as customers again.

The reason the situation is so bad is, first, because there is no intelligent and systematic or even conscientious effort to prevent the selling of dope to adults or even to minors, or to prevent the making of drug addicts by a certain class of doctors.

Second, there is no sufficient penalty for dope selling and the creation of addicts.

Third, there is no enforcement of the penalties that exist.

MANY JUDGES, EVEN FEDERAL JUDGES, LET DOPE SELLERS OFF WITH SMALL FINES—AS LOW AS FIFTY DOLLARS. A FINE LESS THAN THEY WOULD IMPOSE FOR A TRIFLING OFFENSE.

YET DOPE SELLING, ACTUALLY, IS AS CRIMINAL AS MURDER. IT DESTROYS LIVES, NOT AS QUICKLY AS A MACHINE GUN, BUT WITH MORE PROLONGED AGONY. ONE DOPE SELLER CAN DESTROY A HUNDRED LIVES AND REDUCE A HUNDRED SOULS TO DEGRADATION.

The fourth reason for the spread of dope in this country is that there is no real appreciation of the contamination of drug addiction, no clear comprehension of its contagious character.

Even the most degraded drunkard will warn his acquaintances, especially youths of his acquaintance, to beware of liquor. But a drug addict corrupts others deliberately and persistently.

Drug addiction is much more contagious than leprosy and just as destructive to mind and body, but there is no effort toward the isolation of drug addicts and in that fact lies the fifth fault with the dope situation in this country.

THE COUNTRY IS JUST BEGINNING TO CONSIDER THE NECESSITY OF CURING THE DRUG ADDICT. THAT IS A WONDERFUL STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION, BUT IT IS ONLY THE FIRST STEP.

The country must first cure the addict.

Second, it must keep him cured.

Third, if it cannot keep him cured, it must isolate him, preferably on an island like Molokai, where, if he is incurable, he can live without being a constant and contagious menace to healthy and wholesome people.

Fourth, the country must prevent the creation of drug addicts.

The medical profession must be kept under a certain supervision and surveillance to prevent the undue administering of narcotics. Laws should compel every physician to write his prescriptions in plain English and to give a copy of the prescription to the drug store and a copy to the patient.

The Harrison law provides that copies of prescriptions containing narcotics must be filed by the druggist who fills them and a copy sent to the federal authorities, but the state should require a copy for its records, also.

PHYSICIANS WHO ADMINISTER NARCOTICS UNDULY SHOULD BE DISQUALIFIED FROM PRACTICING.

There positively must be some penalty hanging over their heads to make them careful in this respect.

Dope selling should be adjudged a felony and dope sellers punished by imprisonment without the alternative of a fine.

Such criminals should be deprived of citizenship and subjected to deportation if convicted a second time.

Canada, our neighbor, has been thoroughly aroused to the frightful condition that has been caused by dope pedlars, and the Canadian House of Commons, through a special committee on drug addiction, has added the whipping post to the penalties for illicit drug selling.

It is doubtful whether the infliction of extraordinary punishments of that kind are particularly effective or are in harmony with the spirit of our people.

But it would be natural to inflict severe criminal punishments for one of the most vicious kinds of crime.

And it would be in harmony with the accepted character of our procedure to protect our reputable citizens from the contamination of undesirables not only by keeping undesirables out of the country, but by expelling them from the country when they have proved themselves a definite danger to the peace and happiness of the citizenship.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

STYLES in ladies have changed again. Lissome, pineapple-and-lamb-chop beauties must pass into the back row of the chorus and give all the limelight to milk-and-honey-and-baked-potato partridges.

Skirts and bodices will be full, once more—and they've got to be full of something besides ruffles!

Poor, unhappy man, who was just getting to like the rag-and-a-bone-and-a-hank-of-bobbed-hair girl must readjust his optic nerves, his ideals and his imagination and learn to "prefer partridges." No wonder so many men suffer from astigmatism! It's the constant change of focus, from looking at women.

But it won't be half so hard as you might think for a man to learn to love plump and buxom girls, after all these years spent in cultivating a superficial taste for the animated bone.

Men have always had a subconscious weakness for feminine curves. AND softness. And roundness. Because curves and roundness and softness are feminine!

The Oriental, who follows his natural bent and does not allow his women to dictate his preferences, fattens his wives and daughters to suit his taste. There is not a rubber girdle to be found in all his harem! And a hostess hour would be a positive anomaly!

The average, too, likes his ladies to match the over-stuffed furniture. Pulchritude and avoirdupois are synonymous with him. And, in all history, from Venus down to Pompadour there has never been an actually BONY siren.

It is going to be a little hard for some women who have grown used to the spinach-and-lettuce diet to revive a dead desire for creamed potatoes, sliced bacon and buttered muffins. But for most of us, it is a grand and glorious feeling! To know that once more we may sip a caramel sundae without risking a man's love! That cream in our coffee does not mean we are taking the first step toward divorce! Ah, sweet dispensation! Divine relief!

The hollow mockery of the reducing diet, for most women, was that it ALWAYS reduced them in the wrong places. It robbed them of their calves and their dimples and left hollows and furrows in their cheeks, which made them look like starving war children. But the hips clung persistently, and had to be rolled and banted off.

Oh, well! It's all over now—and we can go gleefully back to the full dinner pail and the joyous days when men were men—and women were butter balls!

We can be lazy and good-natured, and inert—and beloved! We can take our beauty naps and loll around eating chocolates until we choke.

Because the peppy, snappy metabesome high-strung ninety-pound neurotic may be the girl men can't forget. But the placid, sweet-tempered, well-nourished, roly-poly house pet is the girl they MARRY!

Gentlemen, prefer "CURVES—whether they know it or not!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Men use thought only to justify their wrong doings, and employ speech only to conceal their thoughts. —Voltaire.

Nature has always had more force than education. —Voltaire.

The chief difference between a wise man and an ignorant one is, not that the first is acquainted with regions invisible to the second, away from common sight and interest, but that he understands the common things which the second only sees. —King.

As order is heavenly, where quiet reigns,
So strife is hell, or a mischief as great. —Tusser.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I HAVE a contempt for lazy people. I look with virtuous disproval upon their shiftless ways, their wasteful dawdling when there's work to do. I refuse to dawdle with them. In every way possible I show my disapproval of lazy people—

BUT I ENVY THEM!

I loathe cowards. I note with horror their evasions of responsibility, their contemptible flight from danger, their escape from painful consequences. I tell myself how much nobler it is to be brave and resolute—and how glad I am that I am not a coward.

BUT NEVERTHELESS, I ENVY THEM!

I detest liars. I note their duckings and dodgings with disgust. I try to tell the truth, though often it complicates life terribly. But I insist that I would rather suffer any pain than be a liar.

AND YET—I ENVY THEM!

Outlaws—they're a bad lot. Bandits, adventurers, all such prowlers on the borders of society—as a respectable citizen I take my stand against them. I talk loudly about methods of curbing their lawlessness. I croak dire prophecies about the bad end they'll come to.

AND ALL THE TIME I'M SIMPLY GREEN WITH ENVY OF THE GRAND, EXCITING TIME THEY'RE HAVING.

You can go right down the line of the vices and my reaction is the same to every one of them—I'M LINED UP WITH THE SAINTS BUT GOSH, HOW I ENVY THE SINNERS!

Is this a confession of my individual depravity?

It is not.

It is the story of all men.

It is your story as well as mine.

IT IS THE STORY OF CIVILIZATION.

Men have always been involved in a struggle between their respect for virtue and their longing for vice. That is what has made them men. Otherwise they would have stayed apes.

Every normal creature wants to be lazy, cowardly, dishonest, lawless, because that was its natural condition as a brute.

But in every normal human creature there is also a small, fierce urge which makes it reach toward proud, industrious orderly, honest, brave life.

Always the two urges are in conflict and out of that struggle comes civilization.

Do not be horrified or discouraged if you see that struggle going on in yourself or in your children. Do not feel that you, or they are unusual, abnormal. Do not feel that you or they have a secret shameful Other Self. Of course, you have. Everyone has. That's human life.

Human life is—AN APE REACHING FOR THE STARS.

Sometimes the ape will be so strong in you that you will feel its matted, hairy hide and hear the gnashing of its yellow fangs. Laziness, dishonesty, cowardice, greediness, lawlessness, selfishness, conceit—these are ape qualities. We all possess them, for we all harbor apes. You will feel that ape shambling in you—often.

But sometimes, for a brief breathless instant the ape will uncannily stand upright and there with in its brutish hands will gleam a star. And for that little space the brute will be a Man!

REACH FOR YOUR STAR!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, March 4—Diary of a modern Pepys: Awake and in a fret over having to pay $9 for 11th row theater seats plainly marked $6, albeit not for myself. To breakfast of hominy cakes with sorghum molasses and Bernard Sobel outfumbled me for the check.

So afoot about town and had a photograph taken for Aunt Betty, who is the most charming lady I know. Then stopped at a theater rehearsal, where a group of Malays sang chanting songs, monotonous but very sad, and home to my drudgery.

In the evening with my wife to walk along the park wall of upper Fifth ave., stopping to talk to George Worts, the tayle writer, and also Mary Harriman Rumsey, E. H.'s daughter, and back to our tavern. To bed reading a hair-raising book, the wind shrieking delightfully.

EXPERTS say the increasing number of apartment houses with dining room service on each floor is the answer to New York's what-to-do servant problem. Smaller cities, due to scarcity of jobs, are not confronted with such difficulties. The New York servant for years knew he could walk from one job to another and became a shade or so uppish. Now it is different.

SO many have given up private homes—upper Fifth ave. is an example—domestic servants are a glut on the market. Employment agencies can fill all demands. Country homes are sold by hundreds and a number are buying places abroad where servants are easier to handle.

THERE are also enough chauffeurs for private families, whereas the demand a few years ago exceeded the supply. Thousands of car owners have abandoned automobiles for the expert rental service New York offers. They can secure any make of car, manned by uniformed drivers, in a few moments, and thus avoid the burden and upkeep of a privately owned auto.

AT the Vanderbilt mansion at Fifth ave. and 52d st. the other evening a gaudy canopy stretched across the sidewalk from curbstone to entrance—an indication Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt were "having company." New York's usual curiosity was pronounced, and in a "short time police had to be called to keep them in line while four or five cars unloaded dinner guests. Many waited in the chill for the departure.

BEFORE the slight Broadwayization of Fifth ave. set in, uniformed butlers peeping through grilled doors at the proletariat was a high spot of metropolitan life for those of us whose idea of a servant was encompassed in the $3 a week—Thursday afternoon off—hired girl. They were pretty grand in their white wigs, buckled knee pants and gold braided monkey coats, and yet somehow offered a tinge of sadness. Every evening after dusk they watched the passing parade with a gloomy dignity. I always wanted to stop, call out to one, "Hey, Jack! gotta match?" and skeedaddle off like everything.

ONE of New York's most famous art editors has a disarming method of rejecting efforts of artists who tried to illustrate stories for his magazine. If the work does not ring the bell, he peers over his glasses and says slyly: "This does not steal my heart away." It is said in all his years of dealing with temperamental artists he has never offended one.

IT has been estimated that tips during New York's lunch time total $50,000 a day, which seems a good one on somebody, allright, allright.

AND the biggest tips in town are said to be those received by waiters at Reuben's between the hours of 4 and 6 in the morning. Reuben's, which started out as a sandwich and became something or other very what-do, has now reached the swankiness of allowing lady diners to bring their lap dogs.

THE grandest news of the week concerns an inveterate cigarette smoker who has given up cigarettes as a result of his disgust for cigarette endorsing ads.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

FOR over a century the Presidents have rolled up Pennsylvania ave. two by two.

George Washington is the only man who didn't have the pleasure of being escorted by his predecessor.

We cannot recall the facts, but there is no doubt that it was due to some slight flaw in the details.

It is a pleasant ride for both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Coolidge. After eight years of traffic jams, Cal. is looking forward to seeing a friendly green light.

Today is Herbert's political honeymoon. He treads a carpet of roses from the Capitol to the White House.

There have been inaugural parades ever since 1789, those good old days when men were men and the solid South was liquid.

But Mr. Hoover's is the newest. And therefore the most important for the next four years.

Many rulers have left many capitols in widly scattered circumstances. The longest of all Inaugural parades was that of Moses, who couldn't get off a detour for 40 years.

When Nero left Rome all aglow he was quoted as saying, "My next speech will burn those guys up."

Napoleon was highly indignant on board the Bellerophon. He said, "I ordered a carriage, not a boat."

Charles the First riding with Cromwell remarked, "I, too, know what it is to be a spare tire."

Helen of Troy looked over the walls and saw the Trojan camouflage. Helen was a smart girl. She said, "There's the horse. Where's the buggy ride?"

So you can see that inaugural speeches are not important unless you are elected.

When that ancient King of Babylon saw the handwriting on the wall he knew that the magicians were not responsible for hats and overcoats.

When Hindenburg rode Unter den Lindens in Berlin he was the recipient of a gracious testimonial from Holland.

It read, "I would like to be there. But one ain't a majority."

It's a wise umbrella that knows when to fold up.

The few recent Inaugurals in Petrograd have been more like stampedes than processions. When Kipling said the captains and the kings depart he forgot to mention that they didn't get rain checks.

Mussolini's Inaugural was a brilliant affair but slightly dimmed by the Duce's largesse of a medication that children do not cry for.

Only America seems to be able to stage the old-time festivals without a diminishing of pomp and glory. It is fortunate that we still have republics to maintain the traditions of autocratic monarchies.
